

Notes on James

2023 Edition
Dr. Thomas L. Constable

Introduction

WRITER

The writer of this epistle was evidently the half-brother of our Lord Jesus Christ (Gal. 1:19) and the brother of Jude, the writer of the epistle that bears his name (cf. Matt. 13:55).¹ This was the opinion of many of the early church fathers and writers.² This James was not the brother of the Apostle John, the son of Zebedee, who suffered martyrdom early in the history of the church (Mark 1:19; Acts 12:2). Neither was he the son of Alphaeus (Mark 3:18) or the father of Judas (Luke 6:16). He was the leading man in the Jerusalem church who spoke at the Jerusalem Council (Acts 15:13-21; cf. 12:17; 21:18; 1 Cor. 15:7). Some commentators believed that the similarities in the Greek of this epistle and James' speech in Acts 15 support his identification as the writer.³ The fact that the writer wrote this epistle in very good Greek should not rule this James out. He would have been fluent in both Aramaic and Greek as a gifted Galilean.

RECIPIENTS

The recipients of this letter were the Jewish Christians of the Diaspora, Jews who had scattered from Palestine and had come to faith in Christ

¹See Donald A. Carson and Douglas J. Moo, An Introduction to the New Testament, pp. 621-26; Douglas J. Moo, The Letter of James, (2000), pp. 9-20.

²E.g., Eusebius, The Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius Pamphilus, 2:23:78-79. Eusebius lived about A.D. 265-340. For fuller discussion, see Peter H. Davids, The Epistle of James, pp. 7-9; Ralph P. Martin, James, pp. xxxiii-lxi; and Joseph B. Mayor, The Epistle of St James, pp. i-lxv.

³E.g., D. Edmond Hiebert, James, pp. 17-18; Walter W. Wessel, "The Epistle of James," in The Wycliffe Bible Commentary, p. 1429.

(1:1). Several Jewish references in the book support the claim that a Jew wrote it to other Jews (e.g., 1:18; 2:2, 21; 3:6; 5:4, 7).

DATE

Josephus wrote that James died in A.D. 62.¹ Josephus did not record the date, but he identified James' death with that of Portius Festus who died in A.D. 62. So James wrote this letter before that date. Many commentators believed that James' lack of reference to the Jerusalem Council (A.D. 49) suggests that he wrote before that meeting. This is a weak argument, however, since the issues that James dealt with in this epistle are different from those that the Jerusalem Council discussed. Reference to the Jerusalem Council in this letter would have been unnecessary. According to tradition, however, James wrote early in the history of the Christian church.

It appears to many scholars and to me that the epistle of James was probably the first divinely inspired one and that James composed it in the middle or late 40s, perhaps A.D. 45-48.² A few believe that he wrote even earlier, perhaps as early as A.D. 34 or 35.³ Many scholars have taken James' lack of references or allusions to other inspired New Testament epistles as additional support for this position. I believe there is no substantial reason to doubt the traditional early date.⁴

PLACE OF WRITING

Since James lived in Jerusalem for most if not all of his Christian life, that city seems to be the most likely place of writing.

¹Flavius Josephus, Antiquities of the Jews, 20:9:1. Josephus was a Jewish general in the Roman army who later became the governor of Galilee in the late first century A.D.

²See Arno C. Gaebelein, The Annotated Bible, 4:2:9-10; Donald W. Burdick, "James," in Hebrews-Revelation, vol. 12 of The Expositors Bible Commentary, p. 162; Wessel, p. 1429; Moo, pp. 25-26.

³Zane C. Hodges, "The Epistle of James," in The Grace New Testament Commentary, 2:1100.

⁴For thorough discussion of the date, see Mayor, pp. cxliv-clxxvii; or Davids, p. 4, who catalogued the opinions of 64 modern commentators regarding the date of composition.

"All the evidence left of his life suggests that he clung throughout his Christian life to Jerusalem and did not undertake such missionary labours as would entitle him to the designation of Apostle."¹

According to Eusebius (c. A.D. 263-340), the scribes and Pharisees threw James down from the pinnacle of the temple, which was 170 feet above the Kidron Valley below, then stoned him, and a fuller (a first-century cloth- or clothes-washer) beat out his brains with a club.²

SPECIAL FEATURES

"... as contemporary rhetorical criticism has pointed out, the NT documents were almost certainly intended for public reading in the churches. Thus James's letter is basically a speech or sermon, cast in written form."³

There are several unique features of this epistle. It contains no references to any of the specific individuals among the original recipients. There is no concluding benediction. And there are very many imperatives in the letter, about one for every two verses.

"No other New Testament book contains such a concentration of commands."⁴

There are many figures of speech and analogies, probably more than in all of Paul's epistles.⁵ James also alluded to over 20 Old Testament books. He referred to many Old Testament characters including Abraham, Rahab, Job, and Elijah—as well as to the Ten Commandments and the Law of Moses. One commentator observed that this book "has a more Jewish cast than any other writing of the New Testament."⁶

There are many references to nature in James. This was characteristic of the Jewish rabbis' teaching in James' day as well as the teaching of the ¹F. Rendall, "The Epistle to the Galatians," in The Expositor's Greek Testament, 3:156.

²Eusebius, 2:23:75-79..

³Hodges, p. 1101.

⁴Kenneth G. Hanna, From Gospels to Glory, p. 409.

⁵J. Ronald Blue, "James," in The Bible Knowledge Commentary: New Testament, p. 816.

⁶Mayor, p. ii.

Lord Jesus Christ. There are also many allusions to Jesus' teaching in the Sermon on the Mount—more than in all the letters of the New Testament combined, according to G. Campbell Morgan.¹ Yet there are only two references to Jesus (1:1; 2:1), which was one factor that led Martin Luther to question whether this book was worthy of being in the New Testament.²

"... in his [Luther's] preface to the New Testament of 1522 James was stigmatized as 'an epistle of straw.' Once Luther remarked that he would give his doctor's beret to anyone who could reconcile James and Paul."³

Luther's problem was that he thought James was writing about becoming a Christian (justification). James was really writing to Christians about how to live the Christian life (sanctification).

"... perhaps no greater mistake can be made in interpreting James than to read his letter in the light of Paul. James, we must remember, is writing (we have argued) before Paul had written any of his letters ..."⁴

The margin of the Nestle Greek Testament version of James identifies 38 references to statements in Matthew. Both books seem to have been written about the same time, namely, in the late 40s A.D.

"Both writers [Matthew and James] seem to have to do with a similar type of community ..."⁵

Leading themes in James include perfection, wisdom, and the piety of the poor.⁶

¹G. Campbell Morgan, The Unfolding Message of the Bible, p. 382. See Virgil V. Porter Jr., "The Sermon on the Mount in the Book of James, Part 1," Bibliotheca Sacra 162:647 (July-September 2005):344-60; idem, "The Sermon on the Mount in the Book of James, Part 2," Bibliotheca Sacra 162:648 (October-December 2005):470-82. See the charts in The Bible Knowledge Commentary: New Testament, pp. 817 and 818, for James' references to nature and the Sermon on the Mount.

²William Barclay, The Letters of James and Peter, p. 28.

³Roland H. Bainton, Here I Stand, p. 259.

⁴Moo, p. 83.

⁵E. M. Sidebottom, James, Jude, 2 Peter, p. 14). See also Davids, pp. 47-48, for a chart of similarities between verses in James and those in the Synoptic Gospels, and Martin, pp. lxxv-lxxvi, for common links between Matthew and James.

⁶Martin, pp. lxxix-lxxxvi.

"As soon as we read through the letter of James we say to ourselves, 'This man was a preacher before he was a writer.'"¹

"In style it reminds one now of the Proverbs, now of the stern denunciations of the prophets, now of the parables in the Gospels."²

"... one of the characteristics of the Epistle is the straightforward, transparent way in which things are put."³

"The Epistle of James is without doubt the least theological of all NT books, with the exception of Philemon."⁴

"Three doctrines come to the surface more often than any others, and of these the most prominent is the doctrine of God. In keeping with the ethical nature of the epistle is the repeated stress on the doctrine of sin. And, surprisingly, the third most prominent theological theme is eschatology."⁵

"The epistle of James is no more anti-Pauline than is the Sermon on the Mount."⁶

"Is there not a significant appropriateness that Hebrews, which stresses faith, should be seconded by James, insisting on good works?—that First Peter, the epistle of future hope, should be followed by second Peter, which is all about present growth in grace?—that the epistles of John, with their emphasis on love, should be balanced by Jude, with its call to contend for the faith? And is it not an obviously perfective finale, that this progressive lesson in matching faith by good works, future hope by present growth, and brotherly love by contending for the faith, should be crowned by the characteristic promise of the Apocalypse—' To him that overcometh'?"⁷

¹J. Alec Motyer, The Message of James, p. 11.

²Mayor, p. i.

³W. E. Oesterley, "The General Epistle of James," in The Expositor's Greek Testament, 4:425.

⁴Burdick, p. 164.

⁵*Ibid.*, pp. 164-65.

⁶George M. Stulac, James, p. 16.

⁷J. Sidlow Baxter, Explore the Book, 6:283.

PURPOSE

"The design of the Epistle is on the one hand to encourage those to whom it is addressed to bear their trials patiently, and on the other hand to warn them against certain errors of doctrine and practice."¹

"The purpose of this potent letter is to exhort the early believers to Christian maturity and holiness of life. This letter deals more with the practice of the Christian faith than with its precepts. James told his readers how to achieve spiritual maturity through a confident stand, compassionate service, careful speech, contrite submission, and concerned sharing. He dealt with every area of a Christian's life: what he is, what he does, what he says, what he feels, and what he has."²

"The chief aim of the Epistle is to strengthen the faith and loyalty of the Jewish Christians in the face of persecution from rich and overbearing Jews who were defrauding and oppressing them."³

OUTLINE

- I. Introduction 1:1
- II. Trials and true religion 1:2-27
 - A. The value of trials 1:2-11
 - 1. The proper attitude toward trials 1:2
 - 2. The end product of trials 1:3-4
 - 3. Help in adopting this attitude 1:5-8
 - 4. The larger view of circumstances 1:9-11
 - B. The options in trials 1:12-18
 - 1. The ultimate end of trials 1:12
 - 2. The source of temptation 1:13-14

¹Mayor, p. cxxviii.

²Blue, p. 818.

³A. T. Robertson, Word Pictures in the New Testament, 6:6.

3. The progress of temptation 1:15
 4. The goodness of God 1:16-18
- C. The proper response to trials 1:19-27
1. The improper response 1:19-20
 2. The essential response 1:21
 3. The complete response 1:22-25
 4. The external behavior 1:26-27
- III. Partiality and vital faith ch. 2
- A. The problem of favoritism 2:1-13
1. The negative command 2:1
 2. The present improper practice 2:2-4
 3. The inconsistency of favoritism 2:5-7
 4. The Christian's duty 2:8-9
 5. The significance of partiality 2:10-11
 6. The implication of our own judgment 2:12-13
- B. The importance of vital faith 2:14-26
1. James' assertion 2:14
 2. James' illustration 2:15-16
 3. James' restatement of his point 2:17
 4. An objection 2:18
 5. James' rebuttal 2:19-23
 6. James' final argument 2:24-26
- IV. Speech and divine wisdom ch. 3
- A. Controlling the tongue 3:1-12
1. The negative warning 3:1
 2. The reason for the warning 3:2
 3. Examples of the danger 3:3-8
 4. The uncontrollable nature of the tongue 3:7-8
 5. The inconsistency of the tongue 3:9-12
- B. Controlling the mind 3:13-18
1. The importance of humility 3:13

2. The importance of graciousness 3:14-16
 3. The importance of loving peace 3:17-18
- V. Conflicts and humble submission ch. 4
- A. Interpersonal and inner personal tensions 4:1-10
 1. The source of conflict 4:1
 2. The explanation of the conflict 4:2-3
 3. The nature of the choice 4:4-5
 4. The resources to choose right 4:6-10
 - B. Self-exaltation 4:11-12
 - C. Self-reliance 4:13-17
 1. The self-centered person 4:13-16
 2. The concluding exhortation 4:17
- VI. Money and patient endurance 5:1-18
- A. Warnings for the rich 5:1-6
 1. The introduction of the problem 5:1
 2. The corrosive effect of wealth 5:2-3
 3. The misuse of wealth 5:4-6
 - B. The proper attitude 5:7-12
 1. The exhortation to be patient 5:7-9
 2. Examples of endurance 5:10-11
 3. The evidence of patience 5:12
 - C. The proper action 5:13-18
 1. The way of release 5:13
 2. The prescription for help 5:14-16
 3. The power of prayer 5:17-18
- VII. The way back to living by faith 5:19-20

MESSAGE

The Book of James teaches us that faith in God should result in behavior that is in harmony with God's will. The theme of the book is "living by faith" or "spiritual maturity." James is like a series of five sermons reworked for publication (cf. Hebrews and Jude).

James' concern was Christian behavior (ethics) as expressive of Christian belief (doctrine). James hardly mentioned most of the fundamental Christian doctrines in this book. His preeminent concern was the practice of Christianity, the manifestation of salvation in shoe leather.

The teaching of this epistle has its roots in Jesus' teaching in the Sermon on the Mount. That was, of course, His great ethical discourse. James made no fewer than 18 references or allusions to Matthew 5—7 in his epistle. James is an exposition of the main ideas in that sermon. Jesus presented three great revelations in the Sermon on the Mount that James expounded in this book:

First, Jesus spoke of the behavior of believers. In Matthew 5:20, Jesus said: "unless your righteousness far surpasses that of the scribes and Pharisees, you will not enter the kingdom of heaven."¹ Jesus was speaking of how righteous behavior manifests itself. James commented on five behaviors in which his readers needed to demonstrate their righteousness. By the way, when James and Jesus spoke of righteousness, they usually meant right conduct. This is the more common Old Testament use of the word. Paul, on the other hand, usually used righteousness when referring to one's right condition, namely, the believer's standing in Christ.

Second, Jesus clarified the believer's goal. In Matthew 5:48, Jesus said: "you shall be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect." This maturity into the image of Christ is God's goal for every Christian (cf. Eph. 4:13). In dealing with each of the five behaviors that he selected, James clarified the goal that the believer should bear in mind and to which he or she should press.

Third, Jesus illuminated the method by which the believer can reach maturity (perfection) in the way he or she behaves. In Matthew 6:1, Jesus said: "Take care not to practice your righteousness in the sight of people, to be noticed by them." Jesus taught that believers should live to obtain God's approval rather than the approval of their fellowmen. James explained what that means in each case for the five behaviors that he dealt with in this epistle. He showed how to live for God's approval rather than for the approval of people.

¹Quotations from the English Bible in these notes are from the New American Standard Bible (NASB), 2020 edition, unless otherwise indicated.

These three great revelations by Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount contribute the hidden framework on which James hung his challenges to his readers. All of these challenges deal with spiritual immaturity. The Sermon on the Mount is like the framework of a house. James covered the framework with his exposition, and what he said is connected to what Jesus said.

In chapter 1 the behavior dealt with is trials: the difficult experiences that every believer encounters in life. James revealed that God's goal for believers in allowing us to experience trials is personal maturity. He also explained that the method by which we attain this goal is by patiently accepting our trials as from God.

In chapter 2 the behavior in view is prejudice. God's goal for believers, which prejudice tends to thwart, is love for all people. The method by which we can reach this goal in God's plan is by exercising genuine faith in God. James explained the relationship between prejudice and faith in this chapter.

In chapter 3 the behavior is our speech. God's goal is that we bless others with our speech: God Himself, and all other people. The method is to receive and use wisdom from God.

In chapter 4 the behavior is conflicts in interpersonal and inner personal relationships. God's goal is that we maintain peace with others, and His method is submission to God.

In chapter 5 the behavior is our use of money. The goal is that we use money to serve others rather than hoarding it for ourselves. The method of attaining this goal is twofold: patience with God, and prayer to God.

"His [James'] short, abrupt paragraphs have been likened to a string of pearls—each is a separate entity in itself."¹

¹Wessel, p. 1430.

I would state the application of this epistle with the following two affirmations:

First, the life of faith is a life of peril. If we would achieve God's goal of righteous behavior we must overcome the obstacles that stand in our way. Our opposition comes from three sources, each of which James dealt with in his exposition of each behavior.

We must challenge the spirit (popular philosophy) of our world. The world system says: Avoid trials (ch. 1). Give preference to those who can help you (ch. 2). Promote yourself by what you say (ch. 3). Demand your rights (ch. 4). Grab all the money you can (ch. 5).

James wrote that we must also deny the lusts of our flesh. The flesh is the second source of peril that we face. By the way, the New Testament writers used the word flesh (Gr. sarx) in three ways, one literal and two metaphorical. Literally it refers to our bodies. Metaphorically, it refers to all that we were in Adam before our regeneration, or it refers to our human nature that is sinful. Here James was speaking of our sinful human nature. The flesh says: Indulge yourself and give in to the temptations that often accompany trials (ch. 1). Love yourself rather than others (ch. 2). Glorify yourself rather than promoting others and God (ch. 3). Assert yourself rather than submitting to God (ch. 4). Serve yourself rather than serving others (ch. 5).

James also cautioned us to resist the devil, the third source of opposition to God's work of producing righteousness in our conduct. Satan says: God hates you, and your trials are an evidence of that (ch. 1). Satan says: God is withholding good things from you that you would surely receive if you showed favoritism to those who are able to favor you (ch. 2). Satan says: God has abandoned you, so you need to speak up for yourself (ch. 3). Satan says: God will not defend you, so you must be more self-assertive (ch. 4). Satan also says: God will not provide for you, so you must hoard your money rather than distributing it as a good steward (ch. 5).

The second affirmation that summarizes the application of the teaching of this epistle is this: The life of faith is a life of power as well as a life of peril. With each of the five major problems that James dealt with, we can see that the life of faith is more powerful than the life of unbelief.

Faith is superior to the spirit (philosophy) of our world. It is stronger than the lusts of our flesh. It is stubborn against the attacks of the devil. Therefore we should continue to live by faith. James' great theme is that we need to keep trusting and obeying God. As we began the Christian life by faith, so we need to continue to live by faith day by day, rather than reverting to our former habit of trusting in ourselves and behaving like unbelievers.¹

¹Adapted from G. Campbell Morgan, Living Messages of the Books of the Bible, 2:2:123-40.

Exposition

I. INTRODUCTION 1:1

The writer first identified himself for the original recipients of this epistle, and greeted them, in order to introduce himself to them.

James (lit. Jacob) was probably the half-brother of the Lord Jesus Christ. He evidently became a believer late in Jesus' earthly ministry (cf. John 7:5; 1 Cor. 15:7). He became the leader of the church in Jerusalem early in its history (Gal. 2:9; Acts 15:13-21).

"Apart from Paul and Peter, no figure in the church of the first days plays a more substantial part upon the historic and legendary stage than James, first Bishop of Jerusalem."¹

James described himself simply as a bond-servant (Gr. doulos) of God and of the Lord Jesus Christ. Only he and Jude, another half-brother of the Lord, described themselves simply as bond-servants in their epistles. This probably indicates that they were so well known in the early church that they did not need to describe themselves in more detail.² James did not refer to himself as Jesus' brother or as the church's leader. He evidently purposed not to know Jesus after the flesh (2 Cor. 5:16) but only as his Lord and God. Being a bond-servant of God was his most important relationship (cf. Rom. 1:1; Phil. 1:1; Titus 1:1; 2 Pet. 1:1; Jude 1; Rev. 1:1). He placed Jesus on an equal level with God by saying that he was the bond-servant of both God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

The term bond-servant did not carry the degrading connotation in the first century that it does today. In the Septuagint, doulos described Israel's great leaders who occupied positions of privilege and honor (e.g., Moses [Deut. 34:5; et al.]; David [2 Sam. 7:5; et al.]; and the prophets [Jer. 7:25; 44:4; Amos 3:7]).³ By using this word James was proudly asserting that he belonged to God and to Jesus Christ body and soul.⁴

¹G. H. Rendall, The Epistle of James and Judaic Christianity, pp. 11-12.

²Mayor, p. 29.

³The Septuagint, often identified as the LXX, is the Greek translation of the Old Testament that was made in the third century B.C.

⁴Burdick, p. 167.

"It is only his servanthood to the Lord Jesus Christ that matters to him here, for this is the theme of his letter: How shall we live as servants of the Lord Jesus Christ?"¹

The 12 tribes (cf. Matt. 19:28; Acts 26:7) scattered abroad most naturally refer to Jewish Christians of the Diaspora, namely, those who were living outside Palestine.² "The 12 tribes" was a synonym for the Jewish race.³ Since this is a catholic epistle (one addressed to a general audience as opposed to a particular church or individual), some scholars have concluded that James wrote to both unbelieving Jews and Christian Jews.⁴ However what he proceeded to write is aimed at believers, not unbelievers, as is clear from the contents of this epistle.

James knew nothing of the ten so-called "lost tribes." He regarded Israel, in its unity and completeness, as consisting of 12 tribes. These Jews were very likely members of the Jerusalem church who had left Jerusalem shortly after Stephen's martyrdom (cf. Acts 8:1, 4; 11:19-20). Some scholars believed they lived within Palestine.⁵ However the location of the recipients does not significantly affect the interpretation of the epistle. What James wrote to them as a fellow Jewish Christian is normative for both Jewish and Gentile Christians, since both groups are one in Christ.

It is unnatural to take the 12 tribes as descriptive of the so-called "new Israel," the church, as some interpreters do.⁶ Israel can, and always does, refer to the physical descendants of Jacob whenever it occurs in the New Testament, just as it does in the Old Testament. Furthermore there is no other Scriptural teaching that the church consists of 12 parts like the nation of Israel did.

James wrote in very good Greek. His grammar, syntax, and word choices were excellent. "Greetings" was a common Greek salutation familiar to his readers.

¹Stulac, p. 30.

²Hiebert, pp. 32-34. Cf. Martin, pp. 8-11.

³Oesterley, 4:419.

⁴E.g., Robert Jamieson, A. R. Fausset, and David Brown, Commentary Practical and Explanatory on the Whole Bible, p.1448.

⁵E.g., Zane C. Hodges, The Epistle of James, p. 12.

⁶E.g., R. V. G. Tasker, The General Epistle of James, pp. 39-40; Motyer, p. 24; and Sidebottom, p. 26.

II. TRIALS AND TRUE RELIGION 1:2-27

James began his letter, which is in many ways a lecture or sermon, by dealing with the problem of trials that all believers encounter. Jews who became Christians in the early history of the church experienced much antagonism and persecution from their unbelieving fellow Jews, as is clear in the Book of Acts. All Christians who take a stand for the Lord continue to have to deal with such trials. Thus James' inspired advice is permanently relevant.

A. THE VALUE OF TRIALS 1:2-11

The writer pointed out the value of trials in order to encourage his readers to adopt a positive attitude toward these experiences, to endure them, and to view them as God's tools. God uses trials to shape believers into people who will glorify Himself.

1. The proper attitude toward trials 1:2

What kinds of trials was James talking about? Did he mean troubles such as running out of money, or failing a test in school, or having to stay up all night with a sick child: everyday troubles? Yes. The Greek word translated trials (peirasmois) means a proving, specifically: "the trial of a man's fidelity, integrity, virtue, constancy ... also an enticement to sin, temptation."¹ Various temptations to depart from the will of God are in view. The context supports this conclusion. Verse 3 restates these trials as "the testing of your faith." James was speaking of the different kinds of trials in which we experience temptation to behave like sinners, rather than remaining faithful to the Savior. He was not distinguishing between internal and external temptations.² Trials come from both directions (cf. v. 14). Any trial can constitute a test of our faith, namely, a temptation to cease trusting and obeying God.

"Trials rightly faced are harmless, but wrongly met become temptations to evil."³

¹A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament, s.v. "peirasmos."

²James B. Adamson, The Epistle of James, p. 53; Sidebottom, p. 30.

³Robertson, 6:11.

Note that James was speaking to Christians: "my brothers and sisters." This title for the readers occurs 15 times in this epistle (cf. 1:16, 19; 2:1, 5, 14; 3:1, 10, 12; 4:11; 5:7, 9, 10, 12, 19).

"Even a superficial reading of James 1:2-18 shows that the author regards his readers as Christians. It may be said that nowhere in the letter—not even in 2:14-26!—does he betray the slightest doubt that those in his audience are truly his brothers or sisters in the Lord. If we do not observe this simple and obvious fact, we may fall into a quagmire of skewed interpretations, just as so many expositors of James have actually done."¹

What follows is instruction concerning how Christians should respond when they experience temptations to sin.

James counseled his readers to view the various kinds of trials and tribulations that they were encountering in their lives as opportunities for growth. He did not urge them to rejoice that they were undergoing trials. He did not advocate a masochistic attitude that unnaturally rejoices in painful experiences. Rather he commanded them to view their trials as profitable, even if unpleasant. Another translation of the words rendered "all joy" can be "pure joy." The opposite would be "some joy"—along with much grief. The attitude that James advocated here can take all the bitterness out of even the most uncomfortable trials. Regardless of the source of our difficulties—the world, our flesh, or the devil—we can and should be joyful as we go through them. The reason follows.

2. The end product of trials 1:3-4

Trials are the means that God uses to make believers the kind of people that bring honor to His name, namely, mature ("perfect and complete," v. 4) Christians. Testing (Gr. dokimion) implies demonstrating the true quality of something when it undergoes a trial. The true nature of gold becomes evident when the refiner heats gold ore over a fire. Similarly the character of God within a Christian, which is there because of the Holy Spirit's presence, becomes apparent through trials if they are responded to properly.

¹Hodges, The Epistle ..., p. 18. See also Hiebert, p. 56; and Thomas D. Ice, "Dispensational Hermeneutics," in Issues in Dispensationalism, p. 32.

These are trials are tests of our faith in the sense that our trust in God and obedience to God are being stretched to the limit by them. Trials can result in endurance, steadfastness, and perseverance. The Greek word translated endurance (hypomonen) describes the quality that enables a person to stay on his or her feet when facing a storm.¹ If we submit to these tests they will eventually make us more mature (fully developed, "perfect," cf. Matt. 5:48; 19:21) and complete (developed in every essential area of our lives). The Greek word holokleros ("perfect") refers to a person who fulfills the purpose for which God created him or her: "those who fully attain to their high calling."² Therefore we should not try to escape from trials but submit to the maturing process with patient endurance and joy. We must learn patience or we will not learn much else.

God will bring every believer who endures trials rather than running from them to maturity as he or she perseveres in them. James taught that, in view of this fact, we should rejoice in our trials rather than rebelling against them. They are God's instruments for perfecting us.

"After over a quarter century of ministry, I am convinced that spiritual immaturity is the number one problem in our churches."³

The concept of living by faith that James introduced here for the first time seems to be the theme that unites all the parts of this epistle. Another writer suggested a variation of this theme, namely, "tests of a living faith."⁴ The Christian who not only experienced justification by faith in the past, but is presently living by faith (trusting in God and obeying Him), has what James calls a living faith. This use of live faith is very important to remember when we come to James' discussion of faith and works in 2:14-26.

¹William Barclay, New Testament Words, pp. 144-45. Cf. Nigel Turner, Christian Words, pp. 318-19.

²Oesterley, 4:422.

³Warren W. Wiersbe, Be Mature, p. 13.

⁴D. Edmond Hiebert, "The Unifying Theme of the Epistle of James," Bibliotheca Sacra 135:529 (July-September 1978):224. See also the subtitle of the 1979 edition of his commentary on James.

"The root difficulty of the readers lies in a distorted conception of the nature of salvation by faith and its relation to daily life as the proving ground for the development of Christian character."¹

3. Help in adopting this attitude 1:5-8

James' reference to lacking nothing (v. 4) led him to digress briefly from his discussion of trials in order to explain (through v. 8) the wisdom necessary to deal with trials appropriately.

"One of the deficiencies that trouble often exposes is lack of wisdom. ... James is speaking of that particular wisdom needed to cope with the various trials they experience."²

1:5 What James just explained is divine wisdom, namely, God's view of life. However the world, which does not have or accept this revealed wisdom, generally fails to appreciate the value of enduring trials. The Christian is apt to take the world's attitude toward his or her trials, rather than God's, and try to escape them at any cost. One evidence of this is that the divorce rate among Christians is about the same as the divorce rate among non-Christians, at least in the United States. Most people count it all joy when they escape trials, and they count it all grief when they have to endure them.

James used the word wisdom (Gr. sophia) in the sense in which the Old Testament wisdom literature used it. There it refers to what God has revealed about His will for human life. Wisdom denotes "a fixed, righteous order to which the wise man submits his life."³ The New Testament writers often regarded wisdom as the supreme gift of the Holy Spirit, and they sometimes identified it with the Holy Spirit.⁴ Consequently the ¹Idem, James, p. 37.

²Hodges, "The Epistle ...," p. 1102.

³Bruce K. Waltke, "The Book of Proverbs and Ancient Wisdom Literature," Bibliotheca Sacra 136:543 (July-September 1979):238.

⁴J. A. Kirk, "The Meaning of Wisdom in James: Examination of a Hypothesis," New Testament Studies 16 (1960):24-38.

wise Christian is the one who views life in the light of God's revelation (i.e., His written Word).

If we do not understand God's view of life, James urged that we keep on asking (Gr. present active imperative) God to enable us to understand it. This is a first class condition in the Greek text that assumes that a condition is true to reality for the sake of the argument. Every Christian lacks this wisdom to some extent. Wisdom is seeing life realistically from God's perspective. The Christian needing more wisdom, who repeatedly asks God to open his or her eyes and heart, can count on God repeatedly granting his or her request. He will give this wisdom freely and graciously ("generously and without reproach").

"He gives to the humble suppliant without upbraiding him with his past sin and ingratitude, or his future abuse of God's goodness."¹

God will do this as often as we need help (cf. Isa. 42:3; Matt. 12:20). This description contrasts God with the double-minded man in verse 8.

We must read this verse in context to understand it correctly. This is not a promise that God will give everyone who asks Him for wisdom a higher IQ. What God promises, in this chapter's context, is the ability to see the importance of enduring trials and persevering in them faithfully.

1:6 In Scripture asking "in faith" always means one of two things: It means either believing that God will do what He has promised, or, if He has not promised it, believing that He can do what the person requesting is asking (cf. Matt. 8:1-4; Mark 4:35-41).

"James teaches that faith is the essential condition of prayer."²

¹Jamieson, et al., p. 1448.

²Adamson, p. 57.

The NASB translation "without any doubting, for the one who doubts" is unfortunate. The Greek word diakrinomenos, used twice in this verse, is better translated: let him ask in faith, free from divided motives and divisive attitudes, for such a person is like an ocean wave ..."¹

Lack of confidence in God's faithfulness or power manifests a lack of consistency in the believer's life. James compared the instability that this inconsistency produces to the surf of the sea. Something other than itself drives it. The surf corresponds to the Christian, who, by not submitting consistently to the will of God, is driven by forces outside himself or herself, rather than by the Holy Spirit within. The surf (Gr. kludon) may refer to the tops of the waves that the wind blows off (cf. Luke 8:24). The low- and high-pressure conditions of life tend to blow us around in a similar fashion.

1:7 Such a person's problems are not only subjective, feeling his circumstances are directing him rather than God, but they will also be objective (real). He really is at the mercy of circumstances and events beyond his control. This type of inconsistent ("double-minded" or "unstable," v. 8) person resists God's work in his life. Rather than simply perfecting maturity in the person through his trials, God now also has to discipline (educate) him regarding his attitude toward his trials.

In the context "anything" (v. 7) refers primarily to wisdom (v. 5). If such a person is not going to trust God ("ask in faith," v. 6), he or she will fail to enjoy the confidence that comes from knowing that God is in control of his or her trials and ought not to expect anything (i.e., spiritual wisdom) from the Lord. In a larger sense, of course, our failure to trust God can rob us of the confidence that comes when we know that all of what God has revealed is true.

1:8 In this context the double-minded (dipsychos, lit. two-sided; cf. 4:8) man is one who trusts and obeys God only part of the time, not consistently. A double-minded person is one who has a divided opinion or allegiance (e.g., Lot; cf. Matt. 6:24; 1 Clem. 11:2). He is unstable, unsteady, fickle, staggering, and reeling like a drunken man.¹

¹See David DeGraaf, "Some Doubts about Doubt: The New Testament Use of Diakrino," Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 48:8 (December 2005):741-43. Cf. 2:4.

"... the man is a walking civil war in which trust and distrust of God wage a continual battle against each other."²

In summary, God will help us take His view of trials, which James explained in verses 3 and 4, if we ask Him to do so in prayer. We can and should be joyful while experiencing trials that constitute temptations to depart from God's will. We can count it all joy because we know that, if we remain faithful to God, He will use these trials to produce what is glorifying for Him and what is good for us, namely, our spiritual maturity.

4. The larger view of circumstances 1:9-11

James had been urging his readers to adopt God's view of their trials (vv. 2-4). Now he returned to this subject, broadened their perspective, and encouraged them to adopt God's viewpoint on all their present circumstances.

1:9 Materially poor ("humble") believers should derive joy from focusing their thinking on their spiritual riches ("high position").

1:10 Conversely the materially wealthy ("the rich person") should remember that riches are temporary ("will pass away"), and that one's real condition before God is a very humble one ("is to glory in his humiliation").

"The Cross of Christ lifts up the poor and brings down the high. It is the great leveller [sic] of men."³ ¹Robertson, 6:15.

²William Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 54.

³Robertson, 6:15.

"The old adage says, 'There's no pocket in a shroud.'"¹

Grass in many places is not very hardy, but in some parts of the land of Israel it only stays green for a few weeks. The term flowering grass evidently goes back to Isaiah 40:6-8. It is a combination of two thoughts, namely, that the grass withers and the flower fades. In Hebrew, mixing metaphors was a way of enriching the thought.²

The commentators differ in their understanding of who the rich people were to whom James referred. Many concluded that they were believers in view of James' parallel statement in verse 9. They take the verb kauchaomai ("glory" or take pride in), in verse 9, to also apply as the verb in verse 10. Likewise, the subject "brother or sister," in verse 9, seems to be the subject of verse 10 again.³ Other interpreters believe that the context points to the rich being unsaved.⁴ I think the evidence favors the view that they were Christians, probably Jewish Christians (cf. 5:1-6). But the fact that James did not make this clear suggests that he intended to state a general truth that applies to both kinds of people: material riches are worthless in the face of death and judgment (cf. 1 Tim. 6:9-10, 17-19).

"There is no higher honor than to be the object of God's gracious and loving concern."⁵

1:11 The flower of the grass refers to its stage of green, lush growth when it is at the peak of its vitality. Soon it withers and turns brown in the Middle East (cf. Matt. 6:30). Likewise the rich person may fade away quickly (cf. 4:13).

¹J. Vernon McGee, Thru the Bible with J. Vernon McGee, 5:630.

²Derek Kidner, Psalms 1—72, p. 151.

³E.g., Mayor, pp. 45-46; Adamson, p. 62; Hiebert, James, p. 78; C. Leslie Mitton, The Epistle of James, p. 33; and Blue, p. 82.

⁴E.g., Davids, pp. 76-77; Stulac, pp. 195, 199; and Martin, pp. 25-26.

⁵Hodges, The Epistle ..., p. 23.

"Speaking of his friend, a poor Christian, a wealthy unbeliever remarked, 'When I die, I shall leave my riches. When he dies he will go to his.'"¹

Our trials as well as our triumphs on the earth are only temporary. This fact should help us endure our trials and keep us from becoming self-confident in our triumphs.²

"James seems to be indicating that trials erase any superficial distinctions that may be thought to separate the rich brother from the poor one."³

This introduction to the book (vv. 2-11) is in balance with the conclusion (5:7-20). Both sections talk about the need for patience (1:2-4; 5:7-12) and prayer (1:5-8; 5:13-18), and both end with an emphasis on all the contrasting circumstances of life (1:9-11; 5:19-20).⁴

B. THE OPTIONS IN TRIALS 1:12-18

Thus far James revealed the value of trials, how God uses them to perfect the Christian, and how to obtain God's perspective on one's trials when this is difficult to see. Next he proceeded to explain the consequences of obedience and disobedience, and the source of temptations, so his readers could manage their trials effectively.

1. The ultimate end of trials 1:12

In view of how God uses trials in our lives, we should persevere in the will of God joyfully.

"Every trial, every external difficulty, carries with it a temptation, an inner enticement to sin."⁵

¹Adamson, p. 66.

²See James E. Allman, "Suffering in the Non-Pauline Epistles," in Why, O God? Suffering and Disability in the Bible and Church, p. p. 200-4.

³Burdick, p. 169.

⁴Motyer, p. 12.

⁵Moo, p. 72.

The Christian who perseveres under trials, who does not yield to temptations to depart from the will of God, demonstrates his or her love for God. James used the same Greek word for trials here as in verse 2, but here the negative sense of the word (temptations) is in view.¹ It is those who persevere under trials out of love for God, while being severely tempted, whom He will reward with the crown of life (cf. Rev. 2:10). Only the person who endures through severe testings and temptations will receive this blessing.²

"... James has begun the sentence with 'blessed' makarios, like a new beatitude recalling Matthew 5:3-10 and especially 5:11-12, where Jesus encouraged perseverance in trials 'because great is your reward in heaven.' ... the crown of life would be the ultimate reward, the fulfillment of eternal life and the exaltation with Christ which will be enjoyed by those who, because of faith in Christ, have loved God enough to live faithfully, obeying him even through trials."³

"It is evident that this 'life that God has promised' is more than the eternal life given to every believer at the time of his salvation (John 5:24). Since it is a reward for an accomplishment subsequent to initial faith, it must refer to a still higher quality of life."⁴

"Many Christians are presently following the same path which Esau took (considering the birthright to be of little value), and such Christians will one day come to the end of the matter in the same position as Esau. They, although presently in line to be blessed as the firstborn (every Christian is a firstborn child of God), will have forfeited this right; and they will be rejected for the blessing."⁵

"The idea that all Christians do love God is a fiction. Even our Lord felt it necessary to exhort His inner circle of eleven disciples on this point (cf. John 14:21-24). ... In no

¹See Buist M. Fanning, "A Theology of James," in A Biblical Theology of the New Testament, p. 419.

²See Mayor, p. 194.

³Stulac, p. 49.

⁴Burdick, p. 171. Cf. Curtis Vaughan, James, p. 28.

⁵Arlen L. Chitwood, Judgment Seat of Christ, p. 157.

circumstances more than in trials does the presence or absence of love for God in a Christian become more apparent."¹

For other promises that were given to those who love God, see Exodus 20:6; Deuteronomy 7:9; 30:16, 20; Judges 5:31; Psalm 5:11; Isaiah 64:4; 1 Corinthians 2:9; and 2 Timothy 4:8. The other "crowns" to which the New Testament writers referred are probably parallel references to the fullness of the other special qualities mentioned in their contexts (cf. 1 Thess. 2:19; 2 Tim. 4:8; 1 Pet. 5:4; Rev. 2:10). They are probably not material or physical crowns, but are probably, like this crown, also references to the fullness of the qualities mentioned in their contexts: faithfulness, endurance, leadership, loyalty to Christ, preaching the gospel, an overcoming the world. In other words we should probably interpret them as metaphors rather than as literal crowns.

BELIEVERS' CROWNS
Title	Reason	Reference
An imperishable crown	For leading a disciplined life	1 Cor. 9:25
A crown of rejoicing	For evangelism and discipleship	1 Thess. 2:19
A crown of righteousness	For living the Lord's appearing	2 Tim. 4:8
A crown of life	For enduring trials	James 1:12; Rev. 2:10
A crown of glory	For shepherding God's flock faithfully	1 Pet. 5:4

The New Testament also describes believers' rewards as precious metals (1 Cor. 3:8-14) and as garments (Rev. 3:5, 18; 19:7-8). Those who ¹Hodges, The Epistle ..., pp. 26-27. See also Joe L. Wall, Going for the Gold, pp. 128-29, 140-51.

demonstrate their love for the Lord by persevering under trials will receive life to its fullest potential—in the present and in the future.

BELIEVERS' FUTURE INHERITANCE
What all believers will inherit	What faithful believers will additionally inherit
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Entrance into God's kingdom (John 3:3, 5; 1 Cor. 6:9; Gal. 5:21; Eph. 5:5) • Eternal life (John 3:16, 36; et al.) • Acceptance by God (Rom. 5:1; 8:31-39) • No condemnation (Rom. 5:9; 8:1; 1 Thess. 1:10) • Resurrection or translation (1 Cor. 15:53-57; 1 Thess. 4:13-17) • Glorification (1 Pet. 1:9) 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Abundant eternal life (James 1:12; Rev. 2:10) • Reigning with Christ (Luke 19:17, 19; 2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 2:26-27) • Praise from God (Matt. 25:21, 23; Luke 19:17; John 12:26; 2 Tim. 4:8; 1 Pet. 1:7; 5:4) • Intimacy with Christ (John 15:14) • Various rewards (Matt. 5:12, 46; 6:1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 16, 18; 10:41-42; 16:27; Mark 9:41; Luke 6:23, 35; 1 Cor. 3:8, 14; 9:16-18, 25, 27; 2 Cor. 5:9-11; Phil. 4:1; Col. 3:24; 1 Thess. 2:19; 1 Tim. 4:14; 5:18; 2 Tim. 2:5; 4:8; Heb. 11:6; 1 Pet. 5:4; 2 John 8; Rev. 2:7, 11, 17, 28; 3:5, 11, 12, 21; 11:18; 22:12)

2. The source of temptation 1:13-14

James did not want us to conclude that, because God permits us to experience trials, He therefore must be the source of temptation. That deduction might encourage us to give in to sin.

1:13 God is never the source of temptation. He does not try to get us to sin. Even so some people blame God for their sins.

"Some Jews reasoned that since God created everything, he must have created the evil impulse. And since it is the evil impulse that tempts man to sin, ultimately God, who created it, is responsible for evil."¹

God Himself is not even subject to temptation, because He is totally separate from sin and not susceptible to evil.² The only sense in which God appears to be responsible for sin's existence is that He permits other things to tempt us, namely, the world, the flesh, and the devil (cf. Job 1—2). James did not mention this here.

Jesus taught His disciples to pray, "do not lead us into temptation" (Matt. 6:13; Luke 11:4). Jesus used a figure of speech (i.e., litotes) in which He expressed a positive idea by negating the contrary. Other examples of litotes are: "not a few," meaning "many," and "no rare occurrence," meaning "a frequent occurrence." Neither James here, nor Jesus in the Lord's Prayer, was implying that God sometimes does lead us into temptation. James' point was that He can help us stay away from it. Essentially Jesus meant that we should ask God to allow us to experience as little temptation as possible (cf. Mark 14:38). James was not contradicting Jesus' teaching.

"We all know only too many people who have ceased to walk with God under the pressure of trouble or tragedy ..."³

1:14 Rather than blaming God, we need to recognize that we are responsible when we yield to temptation, not God. There is nothing in God that responds positively to sin, but there is much in us that does.

¹Wessel, p. 1431.

²Mayor, p. 53. See also his extended discussion of this subject on pp. 195-97.

³Motyer, p. 50.

"Desire (epithymia) [lust] does not always have a negative meaning (cf. Lk. 22:15; Phil. 1:23), but here, as most often in the New Testament, it refers to fleshly, selfish, illicit desire. While the word often describes specifically sexual passions, the use of the singular here suggests a broader conception."¹

What practical difference does it make if God tempts us, or if He allows us to experience temptation from other sources? Perhaps we can better appreciate the difference if we think of God as our Father. No good earthly father would deliberately seduce his child into sin by trying to make him or her sin. However, every good father will deliberately allow his child to enter situations in life in which the child must make moral choices. We realize that sending a child to school or into the community, at the proper age, is good for a child because it matures him or her. Likewise God grows us up spiritually by allowing certain experiences, including temptations, to assail us—though He Himself only gives good gifts to His children (v. 18; Luke 11:13). Similarly a good schoolteacher will test his students to help them grow, but he would never tempt them to do evil.

3. The progress of temptation 1:15

Lust in this context is simply the desire to do, have, or be something apart from the will of God. Lust is covert, but sometimes it manifests itself overtly. If we do not quickly control and stop lust, it will lead to sin, and if we do not confess and forsake sin, it will lead to death (Rom. 6:21-23; 8:6). One commentator helpfully identified seven successive stages of temptation.²

"Sin is the result of the surrender of the will to the soliciting of epithymia [lust] instead of the guidance of reason."³

¹Douglas J. Moo, The Letter of James (1985), p. 73.

²See Mayor, p. 198.

³*Ibid.*, p. 55.

"Martin Luther expressed it in this novel way: 'You cannot keep birds from flying over your head, but you can keep them from nesting in your hair.'"¹

Lust can lead to physical death in a believer (1 John 5:16), and it can lead to physical and spiritual death in a non-believer. James' vivid illustration of the childbearing process graphically describes the cause and effect relationship between lust, sin, and death. God desires to lead us into the fullness of life (v. 12), but if we respond improperly to lust, and give in to temptations, we will not obtain the crown of life but death. Death in this verse is the opposite of life in verse 12. The ultimate outcome of capitulating to temptation is death (cf. Prov. 10:27; 11:19; 12:28; 13:14; and 19:16), but the ultimate outcome of resisting it is the fullness of life (cf. John 10:10).

"This attention-getting imagery is designed to stop sinners in their tracks, seeing that death is the natural and terrible end of a life of sin, not just an occasional result for some sinners."²

"Nip sin in the bud of lust."³

4. The goodness of God 1:16-18

James now defended God to those who doubted His goodness or reliability, or who had given up hope in a time of testing, and had concluded that this was their fate.⁴ The theological term for a vindication of God's character is theodicy.

1:16 James wanted his readers to have no doubt about God's purposes and methods in dealing with them, His children. The same "Do not be deceived" expression occurs in 1 Corinthians 6:9; 15:33; Galatians 6:7; and 1 John 3:7. God definitely is not the source of temptation to sin.

When God commanded Abraham to offer Isaac as a human sacrifice (Gen. 22:2), it only appeared to Abraham that God ¹McGee, 5:636.

²Stulac, p. 56.

³Jamieson, et al., p. 1449.

⁴Martin, p. 39.

was tempting him to commit murder. But God prevented him from killing his son (Gen. 22:12). This was a test of Abraham's obedience, not a temptation to sin.

James clarified God's purposes and methods in the following two verses (cf. Gal. 4:7). Verse 15 warns against yielding to temptation by reminding us of the judgment of God, and verse 17 warns us by reminding us of the goodness of God.

1:17 Every act of gift-giving (better than "Every good thing given," Gr. dosis), and every perfect gift given (Gr. dorema), has its source in God. This does not include temptations to sin.

"In the Greek text there are two separate words to describe God's giving. The first word (dosis) means 'the act of giving' and is accompanied by the adjective for good, while the second (dorema) denotes the actual gifts received and is preceded by the adjective for perfect. The first expression emphasizes the goodness of receiving something from God, while the second, the perfect quality of whatever God gives. God's giving is continuously good, and His gifts are always perfect."¹

God created the sun and moon by which we see variation in light. However there is no variation in God's dealings with His creatures (cf. 1 John 1:5). He always does everything for His own glory and His creatures' good.

"Being this, being the Father of those glorious fountains of light, and thus ... purer and clearer than they all, it cannot be that He should tempt to evil."²

"From above" is the translation of the same Greek word (anothen) Jesus used in John 3:7 when He told Nicodemus that he must be born "again." There, the new birth is the good or perfect gift from God that is in view.

¹ The Nelson Study Bible, p. 2105.

² Henry Alford, The Greek Testament, 4:2:282.

1:18 The greatest of God's gifts for believers is the gift of new life in Christ. God's deliberate initiative ("the exercise of His will") provided this gift for us, and His special revelation communicated it to us (i.e., "by the word of truth"). This verse, along with the preceding one, shows clearly that James believed that eternal life was a gift of God's grace.¹ We need to keep this in mind when we read James' discussion of faith and works that follows in chapter 2. James also agreed with Paul that our salvation springs from the sovereign volition of God (cf. Rom. 4:21-22; 2 Cor. 4:6). He initiated it by the exercise of His will.

The first fruits probably refer to all Christians who persevere in spite of trials. All believers will bring glory to God's name, but believers who remain faithful to Christ will please Him greatly, as the first fruits in Israel were a special offering to God. The Greek word translated first fruits (aparche) refers to what is first in honor, as well as to what is first in order. The biblical writers used the term "of persons superior in excellence to others of the same class."²

The point of these verses (17-18) seems to be that God's intention for all people, and believers in particular, is invariably their blessing. Rather than viewing temptations to depart from the will of God as heaven-sent, we must see them as the potential enemies of spiritual growth. Instead of caving in under their weight, we must brace ourselves against them. We can do this knowing that the effort will make us better this side of the grave, and it will yield a wonderful reward the other side of the grave. Satan tempts us in order to bring out the worst in us, but God allows us to be tempted in order to bring out the best in us (cf. Job 1—2).

"James outlined the source of temptation, the steps in temptation, and the solution for temptation."³

¹See Zane C. Hodges, The Hungry Inherit, pp. 43-53.

²*A Greek-English ...*, s.v. "aparche." Cf. Rev. 14:4.

³Blue, p. 822.

C. THE PROPER RESPONSE TO TRIALS 1:19-27

Having explained the value of trials and our options in trials, James next exhorted his readers to respond properly to their trials. In this section he stressed the Word of God, because it is the key to resisting temptations and responding to trials correctly (cf. Matt. 4:1-11).

"Receptivity to the Word, responsiveness to the Word, and resignation to the Word are essential to spiritual growth. One must accept God's Word, act on it, and abide by it."¹

1. The improper response 1:19-20

1:19 James' readers already knew what he had just reminded them of in the preceding verses (vv. 17-18; cf. Prov. 10:19; 13:3; 14:29; 15:1; 17:27-28; 29:11, 20; Eccles. 7:9). Nevertheless, they needed to act in harmony with this knowledge.

"He [James] drives home the teaching about our death-bound, sinful nature with the cry Do not be deceived, my beloved brethren (16); he drives home the teaching about the new birth with the cry Know this, my beloved brethren (19a)."²

We may respond to trials by complaining about them and becoming angry over them. James advised his readers to remain silent ("slow to speak") and calm ("slow to anger"), and to listen submissively to ("quick to hear") the Word of God.³

"It is possible to be unfailingly regular in Bible reading, but to achieve no more than to have moved the book-mark forward: this is reading unrelated to an attentive spirit."⁴

Many people have observed that we have two ears and one mouth, which ought to remind us to listen twice as much as

¹Ibid.

²Motyer, p. 61.

³See David W. Augsburger, Seventy Times Seven: The Freedom of Forgiveness, pp.51-63.

⁴Motyer, p. 65.

we speak (cf. Prov. 10:19; 17:27). Apparently Zeno of Citium (334-262 B.C.), the founder of Stoicism, is the oldest known source of this observation.¹ The rabbis also noted that our ears are open and exposed, whereas our tongue is walled in behind our teeth and lips.²

"Ceaseless talkers may easily degenerate into fierce controversialists."³

"The great talker is rarely a great listener, and never is the ear more firmly closed than when anger takes over."⁴

"The tribute was once paid to a great linguist that he could be silent in seven different languages."⁵

"The most effective means of ministry ... is responding to need; not dumping our load."⁶

1:20 An angry response to temptations does not advance the righteousness that God is seeking to produce in the character and conduct of the believer. The difficulties of life are intended to make us better, not bitter.

"The policy James condemns is one of seeking to promote the cause of freedom by politically motivated and engineered violence (an endeavor to be brought into the discussion at 4:1-3)."⁷

2. The essential response 1:21

The filthiness in view seems to refer to all kinds of unclean behavior that lies outside the will of God, including anger and wrath. The "remains of wickedness" are those evil habits of life that we carry over from the ¹Martin, p. 54.

²Jamieson, et al., p. 1450.

³Alexander Ross, The Epistles of James and John, p. 38.

⁴Motyer, p. 65.

⁵Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 65.

⁶Paul A. Cedar, James, 1, 2 Peter, Jude, p. 43.

⁷Martin, p. 48.

unredeemed world (cf. Ps. 17:4; Luke 6:45). The believer should accept submissively what God has revealed ("in humility receive the word"), and should respond cooperatively to what He commands. The Word of God will then have good soil in which to grow, and it will yield an abundant harvest of righteous character and conduct in the believer.

"We pray for safety instead of purity because we do not see impurity as dangerous."¹

Some interpreters have understood the phrase "which is able to save your souls" to imply that the souls of James' readers still needed to experience salvation from eternal damnation. But since his readers were Christians (vv. 1-2), some interpreters believe that when a believer sins he loses his salvation and needs saving again. Yet the words that James used, in their context, make it clear that this was not what he meant. "Save your lives" or "save your selves" (Gr. psychas) is a better translation that appears elsewhere in the New Testament (cf. Matt. 16:24-27; Mark 3:4; Luke 6:9; 9:56; James 5:20; 1 Pet. 1:9). I counted 40 instances in the New Testament where the translators of the AV rendered the Greek word psyche life rather than soul.² The Greek word translated soul, as contrasted with its English usage, often does not describe a part of the individual that is different from some other part of him or her such as the body, but it often describes the whole person.

"... the expression [save your souls] is never found in any New Testament text which describes the conversion experience!"³

By obeying God's Word the believer can save (preserve) his life (himself, his entire person) from the consequences of sin. The ultimate consequence of sin for a rebellious believer is premature physical (not eternal) death (cf. 1:15; 5:19-20; Prov. 10:27; 11:19; 12:28; 13:14; 19:16; Rom. 8:13; 1 Cor. 11:30; 1 John 5:16).⁴ James was still talking about the consequences of obeying and disobeying God: the crown of life (v. 12) or death (v. 15).

"It has often been observed that the Epistle of James is, of all the New Testament writings, the one which most clearly ¹Stulac, p. 71.

²See also Joseph C. Dillow, The Reign of the Servant Kings, pp. 118-19; and Hodges, The Epistle ..., p. 41. AV refers to The Holy Bible: Authorized King James Version.

³Zane C. Hodges, The Gospel Under Siege, p. 24.

⁴See Arlen L. Chitwood, Salvation of the Soul, pp. 25-34.

reflects the wisdom literature of the Old Testament. The theme of death as the consequence of sin is an extremely frequent one in the book of Proverbs. ... It should be evident that this is the Old Testament concept which furnishes the background for James' thought. A recognition of this fact clarifies a great deal."¹

3. The complete response 1:22-25

Whereas verses 19-21 stress the importance of listening to the Word, verses 22-25 emphasize the necessity of putting the Word into practice: applying it.

1:22 Doing the Word of God, in this context, means persevering in God's will when we experience temptation to depart from it. Hearing God's will is good as far as it goes, and it is indispensable, but obedience should follow. Some Christian disciples deceive themselves by thinking that knowing God's will is all that is needed, but it is only foundational to doing God's will.

"The blessing does not come in studying the Word, but in doing the Word."²

"The call to 'do what it says' lies at the center of all that James teaches. It sums up the message of the whole book: Put into practice what you profess to believe. Indeed, 1:22 may well be the key verse of James's epistle."³

James' original readers would have been used to hearing their Scriptures read aloud weekly in their synagogues.⁴

1:23-24 This illustration is so clear and so common that it needs little comment. The Greek verb katanoeo [to look] refers to careful ¹Hodges, The Gospel ..., pp. 24-25.

²Wiersbe, p. 16. Cf. Matthew Henry, Commentary on the Whole Bible, p. 1932.

³Burdick, p. 175.

⁴Oesterley, 4:432.

observation. It does not mean to cast a hasty superficial glance, as some have suggested.

1:25 The law to which James referred is the revelation of God's will contained in Scripture (cf. Matt. 5:17). It is perfect because it is the perfect will of a perfect God.

"Unlike the imperfect metal mirror in the previous illustration, this law is able to give the beholder a true and undistorted revelation of himself."¹

"The law of God is perfect, first, because it perfectly expresses his nature and, secondly, because it perfectly matches ours."²

It is a law of liberty because, by obeying it, we find true liberty from sin and its consequences (i.e., real life).

"True freedom is the opportunity and the ability to give expression to what we truly are."³

Note James' agreement with Paul that Christians live in comparative liberty under the "law of Christ" (Gal. 5:1; 6:2; cf. Matt. 11:30). Obedient adherence to the Word of God is the key to experiencing God's blessing in life now as well as in the eschatological (end times) future (cf. Matt. 5:3-11).

"... the letter ... is a 'law book' in a deeper and more pervasive sense than any other single writing in the New Testament."⁴

"The whole Epistle is founded on this perfect law of Christ, more especially on that declaration of it contained in the sermon on the mount ..."⁵

¹Hiebert, James, p. 122.

²Motyer, p. 70.

³*Ibid.*, p. 71.

⁴*Ibid.*, p. 21.

⁵Alford, 4:2:288.

"Thus the passage falls into three sections, each with a distinct response to the word God speaks: hearing (19b-20), receiving (21) and obeying (22-25)."¹

4. The external behavior 1:26-27

James proceeded to explain in 1:26—2:13 what a doer of works (1:25) does.

1:26 Religious (Gr. threskos, used only here in the New Testament) describes someone who fears or worships God. In particular it refers to the outward expression of what one believes (i.e., piety, good works), rather than to what he believes, or the fact that he believes deeply. Jews, who were James' original readers (1:1), typically regarded alms-giving, prayer, fasting, regular attendance at worship services, and the observance of holy days and feasts as signs of true spirituality (cf. Matt. 6:1-18). However James said that a better test of spirituality was a person's control of his or her tongue (cf. 3:1-12).

1:27 Taking care of orphans and widows is a duty that lies close to the heart of God (cf. Exod. 22:22-24; Deut. 10:18; Isa. 1:17; Jer. 5:28; Ezek. 22:7; Zech. 7:10). Yet many who professed to love Him neglected this duty (Ps. 68:5; Eccles. 4:1; Mark 12:40).² Likewise personal moral purity is an excellent external indicator of godliness (cf. Acts 15:20; 1 Tim. 5:22). The care of orphans and widows reflects conduct, whereas moral purity reflects character.

"When we read James's injunction to 'keep oneself unstained from the world' (James 1:27), we tend to interpret that in strictly moral terms—as an injunction not to sin. But it also means to keep ourselves 'unstained' from the world's wrong ways of thinking, its faulty worldviews. We must learn how to identify and resist the false worldviews dominant at our moment in history."¹

¹Motyer, p. 63.

²See Richard D. Patterson, "The Widow, the Orphan, and the Poor in the Old Testament and the Extra-Biblical Literature," Bibliotheca Sacra 130:519 (July-September 1973):223-34.

James argued for reality. He did not want us to deceive ourselves into thinking that we are spiritual if our obedience to God is only superficial.

"Like Jesus, James sees worship not in terms of external law but as an expression of inner active goodness."²

"To summarize, vv. 22-27 insist that a person's religion must consist of more than superficial acts. It is not enough to listen to the statement of spiritual truth (vv. 22-25), nor is it sufficient to engage in formal religious activity (v. 26). The person whose religious experience is genuine will put spiritual truth into practice, and his life will be marked by love for others and holiness before God."³

In this chapter James dealt with the practical problem of trials and temptations. He used this subject to remind his readers of some very basic truths that have implications in many other areas of practical Christian living. Two of these areas are: consistent commitment to God, and obedience to His Word. We will demonstrate behavior that is as genuinely religious as anything anyone can do when we respond appropriately to temptations to depart from God's will. The appropriate response involves both rejecting them and rejoicing in them, because we believe that God is using them to mature us for His glory.

III. PARTIALITY AND VITAL FAITH CH. 2

"In the epistle of James, the Holy Spirit has given the church a commentary on Jesus' Sermon on the Mount and Sermon on the Plain, a commentary that is rich in applications for daily life."⁴ ¹Nancy R. Pearcey, Total Truth, p. 121.

²Adamson, p. 85.

³Burdick, pp. 176-77.

⁴Stulac, p. 34. Cf. Davids, pp. 47-50.

The similarities appear both in subject matter and in structure. Note the parallels between Matthew 7:1-27 and James 2:1-26 below, especially Matthew 7:12 (cf. Matt. 22:39; Lev. 19:18).¹

Matthew 7		James 2
vv. 1-2	Prohibition against judging	v. 1	Prohibition against judgmental favoritism
vv. 3-5	Illustration of removing one's own faults so that one can help remove others' faults	vv. 2-4	Illustration of removing one's own partiality so that one can judge or instruct others
v. 6	Warning not to despise what is sacred in favor of dogs or pigs that will harm you	vv. 5-7	Warning not to despise brothers who are rich in faith in favor of others who harm you
vv. 7-11	Encouragement to ask and to believe
v. 12	Summary of the law as doing to others what you would want for yourself	vv. 8-11	Summary of the law as loving others as yourself
vv. 13-14	Summary admonition to follow the narrow way that leads to life	vv. 12-13	Summary admonition to follow the law that gives freedom
vv. 15-23	Warning against false prophets, with the true test presented: deeds	vv. 14-19	Warning against dead faith, with the true test presented: deeds
vv. 24-27	Parable to illustrate putting Christ's words into practice	vv. 20-26	Examples to illustrate putting faith into practice

¹Stulac, p. 92.

Chapter 2 of James deals with the subject of partiality (or favoritism) and vital faith. Verses 1-13 introduce the problem of favoritism. Partiality as practiced by Christians is a manifestation of inconsistent love for other people. We do not love some people as we should when we show favoritism. Throughout this epistle James dealt with inconsistencies in Christian behavior. We saw this in chapter 1. There the inconsistency involved regarding trials as good gifts from God—sometimes—and as bad gifts at other times. In chapter 3, the inconsistency is with our speech. In chapter 2, it is inconsistent treatment of other people. Consistency is very important in both theology and practice, as well as in many other aspects of life, even such as cooking.

A. THE PROBLEM OF FAVORITISM 2:1-13

James' previous reference to hypocritical religiosity (1:26-27) seems to have led him to deal with one form of this problem that existed among Christian Jews of his day. It is still with us today. It is the problem of inconsistent love for other people, which manifests itself in how we treat them. James wrote this chapter in order to exhort his readers to deal with this very basic inconsistency in their lives and so to progress toward spiritual maturity.

"The connection of this warning against social discrimination with the previous ch. 1 seems fairly obvious. Truckling [deferring] to the rich and apathy or worse toward the poor are two sides of the same base coin rejected by the touchstone of 1:27 and of 2:8."¹

"He [the believer] must show courtesy to all, compassion for all, and consistency to all. Equity, love, and fidelity are the vital ingredients."²

1. The negative command 2:1

James came right to the point; we know exactly what his concern was. Personal favoritism is hardly a glorious characteristic, and it is inconsistent for a Christian who worships the glorious Lord Jesus Christ to practice it ¹Adamson, p. 102.

²Blue, p. 824.

(cf. Matt. 22:16 Acts 10:34). All earthly distinctions disappear in the presence of our glorious Lord (cf. Heb. 1:2-3). It was especially appropriate for James to address his readers as "my brothers and sisters" here, since he proceeded to encourage them to practice brotherly kindness. Such behavior would be glorious, namely, in harmony with their glorious Lord Jesus Christ.

"... the intensely Jewish character of this Epistle makes it reasonably certain that the familiar Jewish conception of the Shekinah is what the writer is here referring to [when he wrote "glorious"]. ... The Shekinah [from the Hebrew root shkn, meaning to dwell] was thus used by Jews as an indirect expression in place of God, the localized presence of the deity."¹

"... a Christian is (or should be) the last person to be impressed by the sham glory of social status."²

It may be helpful to distinguish partiality or favoritism (Gr. prosopolepsia, Rom. 2:11; Eph. 6:9; Col. 3:25; cf. Acts 10:34) from some of its synonyms. One definition of prosopolepsia is as follows:

It is "the fault of one who when called on to requite or to give judgment has respect to the outward circumstances of men and not to their intrinsic merits, and so prefers, as the more worthy, one who is rich, high-born, or powerful, to another who is destitute of such gifts."³

Favoritism (partiality) implies an inclination to favor a person or thing because of strong fondness or attachment. We may say that an orchestra conductor, for example, has a partiality for the works of a particular composer. Treating people with partiality may spring from predilection, or from prejudice, or from bias.

Predilection implies a preconceived liking formed as a result of one's background, temperament, etc., that inclines one to a particular preference. We might say that a certain person has a predilection for murder mysteries.

¹Oesterley, 4:435, 436. Specifically shekinah means the glory of the divine presence represented as light and/or a cloud.

²Adamson, p. 104.

³*A Greek-English ...*, s.v. "prosopolepsia," p. 551.

Prejudice implies a preconceived and unreasonable judgment or opinion, usually an unfavorable one, marked by suspicion, fear, intolerance, or hatred. We might say that racial prejudice incited a lynch mob.

Bias implies a mental leaning in favor of or against someone or something without passing judgment on the correctness or incorrectness of the preference. One might say that someone has a bias toward the color blue. James was dealing primarily with partiality.

2. The present improper practice 2:2-4

The situation that James described in verses 2 and 3 presents what some have called "the case of the nearsighted usher." Some interpreters believe that this was a hypothetical situation that James constructed.¹ Others believe that it was a real situation that he knew about.² There is no way of knowing now, but whether the situation was hypothetical or real is unimportant.

"Someone has said, 'Some go to church to close their eyes, and others go to eye the clothes.'"³

2:2-3 Assembly is literally synagogue. In the early history of the church, Jewish believers met in Jewish synagogues until their unbelieving Jewish brethren forced them out. This reference suggests that James probably wrote this epistle early in the history of the church.

There is some debate among the commentators about whether a public worship service or a congregational meeting for the purpose of hearing a judicial case is in view here.⁴ The term synagogue meant a public worship service in early Christian literature, but the following verses may suggest a ¹E.g., Davids, p. 107.

²E.g., Martin, pp. 60, 63.

³McGee, 5:646.

⁴Adamson, p. 105, argued for the first option and Martin, pp. 59, 61, for the second.

judicial setting. This issue does not affect the meaning of the passage significantly.

"... in its early days the Church was predominantly poor and humble; and therefore if a rich man was converted, and did come to the Christian fellowship, there must have been a very real temptation to make a fuss of him, and to treat him as a special trophy for Christ."¹

"The 'gold ring' was an emblem of the upper-level Roman 'equestrian' class, although James may not intend quite so specific an identification."²

The synagogue official who directed people to their seats was called the chazzan (from the Hebrew root hzn, i.e., the man who "had charge").³

2:4 The form of James' question in the Greek text expects a positive answer: "have you not ...?" The usher made two errors: First, he showed favoritism because of what the rich man might do for the church if he received preferential treatment. He should have treated everyone graciously, as God does. This reflects a double-minded (and hypocritical) attitude in the usher, thinking like the world—in this special case—while thinking like God thinks in other respects (1:8).

Second, the usher, who represents all the believers, manifested evil motives in judging where to seat the two visitors. His motive was what the church could obtain from them, rather than what it could impart to them. The Christian and the church should primarily seek to serve others, rather than getting others to serve them (cf. Mark 10:45).

"Prejudice is an evil that exhibits the character of the one who practices it."⁴

¹Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 76.

²Moo, The Letter ..., (2000), p. 103.

³Oesterley, 4:437.

⁴Hiebert, James, p. 139.

3. The inconsistency of favoritism 2:5-7

James' three questions in these verses all expect positive answers, as is clear in the construction of the Greek text.

- 2:5 Since God has chosen the poor of this world to be the heirs of His kingdom, it is inconsistent for Christians to withhold blessings from them (cf. Matt. 5:3; Luke 6:20). In reality, God has chosen more poor people than rich (cf. Luke 1:52; 1 Cor. 1:26). The kingdom in view here is probably the messianic kingdom over which Christ presently rules from heaven and in which Christians participate with Christ whom they love.¹ This seems clear from the context. The heirs of this kingdom are believers (cf. 1:12; Matt. 5:3, 5; Mark 10:17-22; 1 Cor. 6:9-10; Gal. 5:21; Eph. 5:5). Another view is that the heirs of the kingdom are only faithful disciples.²
- 2:6 When a Christian dishonors the poor he or she treats them exactly opposite from the way God treats them (cf. 1 Cor. 11:22; 1 Pet. 2:17). Instead of favoring Christians, James reminded his readers that the characteristic response of the rich to them had been to oppress them (cf. Mark 13:9; Acts 4:1-3; 13:50; 16:19; 19:23-41). How inconsistent it is to despise one's friends and honor one's foes. The oppression in view could have been physical and/or legal ("personally drag you into court").
- 2:7 The rich not only typically oppose Christians but they also typically speak against Christ ("blaspheme the good name"). This was as true in James' world as it is in ours. It is inconsistent to give special honor to those who despise the Lord whom believers love and serve. To blaspheme or slander (Gr. blasphemeo) means to mock deliberately or to speak contemptuously of God. Perhaps those who were blaspheming Christ's name were unbelieving Jews (cf. Acts 13:45).³ "The good name by which you have been called" may not mean the ¹Cf. Ibid., p. 141; Oesterley, 4:438; Alva J. McClain, The Greatness of the Kingdom, p. 432.

²See Hodges, The Hungry ..., pp. 96-107.

³Mayor, p. 88.

name that they bore, but the name under whose protection they stood.¹

The last part of verse 6 and verse 7 may sound like James was prejudiced against the rich. But he was only describing the behavior of some rich people in order to emphasize the foolishness of giving them preferential treatment.

4. The Christian's duty 2:8-9

2:8 James did not mean that Christians should avoid honoring the rich but that we should love everyone and treat every individual like we would treat ourselves (Matt. 7:12; cf. Lev. 19:18). The royal (Gr. basilikos) law is royal in that it is the law of the King who heads the kingdom (Gr. basilikon) that believers inherit (v. 5).² It is also royal in that it is primary: it governs all other laws dealing with human relationships (Matt. 22:39; cf. Lev. 19:18). Moreover it is "conduct of a high order that is worthy of a king."³ The phrase royal law reflects the Latin lex regia, which was known throughout the Roman Empire.⁴

2:9 In this verse James used the verb form ("show partiality") of the same Greek word that he used in verse 1, namely, prosopolepto. The type of preferential treatment that James dealt with in this pericope (section of text, 2:1-13) violates the royal law, because it treats some as inferior and others as sources of special favor (cf. Acts 10:34). It also violates specific commands found in God's Word that reveal God's will in interpersonal dealings (Matt. 7:12; cf. Lev. 19:15).

"The passage calls us to consistent love, not just polite ushering. People of low income are to be fully welcomed into the life of the church. The passage calls us to be blind to economic differences in how we offer our ministries. The poor person is as worthy of our discipling and pastoral care and love ¹Oesterley, 4:440.

²Motyer, pp. 96-97.

³Hodges, The Epistle ..., p. 53.

⁴Blue, p. 825.

as the person who has the means to rescue our church from its budget crisis."¹

"Anyone who shows favoritism breaks the supreme law of love for his neighbor, the law that comprehends all laws governing one's relationships to one's fellowmen."²

5. The significance of partiality 2:10-11

2:10 James anticipated that some of his readers might feel that preferential treatment was not very important. Consequently he pointed out that the practice of preferring certain individuals makes one a violator of God's law. We become guilty of all in the sense that we have violated God's law, not that we have violated every commandment in that law. One can never claim to behave righteously because he or she keeps only part of God's laws.

"The Jew was very apt to regard the law as a series of detached injunctions. To keep one of these injunctions was to gain credit; to break one was to incur debt. Therefore, a man could add up the ones he kept and subtract the ones he broke, and, as it were emerge with a credit or a debit balance."³

"Our obedience to God's will cannot be on a selective basis; we cannot choose that part that is to our liking and disregard the rest. God's will is not fragmentary; the entire law is the expression of His will for His people; it constitutes a grand unity. To break out one corner of a window pane is to become guilty of breaking the whole pane. He who crosses a forbidden boundary at one point or another is guilty of having crossed the boundary."¹

¹Stulac, p. 93.

²Burdick, p. 180.

³Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 81.

2:11 James illustrated this point with a hypothetical case involving two very severe violations of the law. Not all sins are equally serious, in that the consequences of some sins are greater than others, but all sins are equally serious in that any sin is a violation of God's will.

6. The implication of our own judgment 2:12-13

2:12 The law of freedom (1:25) is the law of God that liberates us now: "It was for freedom that Christ set us free" (Gal. 5:1). It is the same as the law of Christ (Gal. 6:2) in contrast to the Mosaic Law. As free as we are under the law of Christ, we need to remember that God will judge us (Rom. 14:10-13; 1 Cor. 3:12-15; 2 Cor. 5:10). We need to speak and act accordingly, specifically, without prejudice toward others.

"Since he is speaking to believers, the judgment to which he refers must be the judgment of believers at the judgment seat of Christ (2 Cor. 5:10)."²

2:13 God will not judge us with partiality. He will punish the unmerciful unmercifully. We need to understand this statement in the light of other revelations concerning how God will judge believers. We are in no danger of losing our salvation or even experiencing God's wrath. However, we will suffer a loss of some reward if we sin by practicing unmerciful favoritism (2 Cor. 5:10; cf. Matt. 5:7; 6:15; 7:1; 18:23-25).

On the other hand, if we are merciful in dealing with our fellow men, God will be merciful in dealing with us when we stand before Him (cf. Matt. 25:34-40). Mercy triumphs over (trumps) judgment just as love triumphs over (trumps) partiality. We should accept one another with courtesy, compassion, and consistency.¹

¹Hiebert, James, p. 148.

²Burdick, p. 180.

In modern life partiality sometimes arises because of differences in economic levels, race, religious preferences, political views, educational backgrounds, and personal opinions, to name only a few causes.² For Christians it is sometimes harder to be impartial toward sinners who flaunt their sin than it is to those who acknowledge that they have sinned. However, because Christ died for all, we should reach out to all as He did, rather than being unfriendly and cliquish. This is true whether the sinners are homosexuals, AIDS patients, the murderers of unborn children, liars, adulterers, thieves, gossips, or gluttons, for example. This reaching out will be an accurate indicator of the extent to which Christ's love controls us (cf. 1:27).

This section of verses may raise a question in some minds concerning how James viewed the Christian's relationship to the Mosaic Law. Was he implying that we are responsible to keep the whole Mosaic Code? His own words at the Jerusalem Council show that this was not his view (cf. Acts 15:13-21). God gave the Mosaic Law both to regulate the life of the Israelites and to reveal the character and purposes of God to the Israelites and all other people. Its regulatory function ceased when Jesus died on the cross (Rom. 10:4; Heb. 7:12). Its revelatory value remains forever: it is part of "all Scripture" that is still profitable (2 Tim. 3:16).

The moral revelation that James referred to here is as applicable now as it was before the Cross. God still expects people to live in its light. Whereas God has terminated the Mosaic Law as a codified body of law, some individual commands within this covenant continue in force under the new "law of freedom." These are the laws affecting all human conduct presently, in contrast to those affecting only the life of the Israelites under the Mosaic Law. Christians live under a new set of rules, the law of liberty. Israelites lived under a different set of rules, the Law of Moses. The fact that the so-called golden rule was part of both the Mosaic Law and the law of Christ, does not mean that we are still under the Mosaic Law.³

¹Blue, p. 825.

²See Larry A. Mercer, "A Biblical and Cultural Study of the Problem of Racism," Bibliotheca Sacra 153:609 (January-March 1996):87-103.

³For further discussion of the Christian's relationship to the Mosaic Law, see Charles C. Ryrie, "The End of the Law," Bibliotheca Sacra 124:495 (July-September 1967):239-47;

B. THE IMPORTANCE OF VITAL FAITH 2:14-26

Some have seen this section of James as dealing with a new subject, namely, the relationship of faith and works, whereas the previous one dealt with partiality (vv. 1-13). It seems to me and to others, however, that this section relates to the preceding one in the same way that 1:19-27 relates to 1:2-18: It deals with a larger, more basic issue that connects with and underlies the practical problem just discussed.

"In this section St. James proceeds to enlarge on the meaning and nature of that faith in Jesus Christ which was spoken of in ver. 1 as inconsistent with prosopolempsia [respect of persons]."¹

In his discussion of favoritism James argued for genuineness and warned of superficial self-deception. The larger issue is the whole matter of faith in God. James wrote this section in order to challenge his readers to examine the vitality of their faith in God. Were they really putting their faith into practice and applying their beliefs to their behavior? Their preferential treatment of some people raised this question in James' mind.

"Not only is the mature Christian patient in testing (James 1), but he also practices the truth. This is the theme of James 2. Immature people talk about their beliefs, but the mature person lives his faith. Hearing God's Word (James 1:22-25) and talking about God's Word can never substitute for doing God's Word."²

There have been three primary interpretations of this passage of Scripture. The first view is that it refers to a person who was a believer but has lost his salvation. He used to have saving faith but does not have it any longer. This is the view of most Arminians. The second view is that it refers to an unbeliever who professes to be a Christian but has never truly exercised saving faith in Christ. His faith is only intellectual assent to gospel truth, not saving faith.³ One advocate of this interpretation wrote: "His [James'] and J. Dwight Pentecost, "The Purpose of the Law," Bibliotheca Sacra 128:511 (July-September 1971):227-33.

¹Mayor, p. 95.

²Wiersbe, p. 63.

³E.g., Burdick; Tasker; Motyer; Fanning, pp. 424-27; and John F. MacArthur, Faith Works, pp. 139-55.

contrast is between two kinds of faith: one that saves and one that doesn't."¹ The third view is that it refers to a believer who is not living by faith. He is not behaving consistently with what he believes.² The first two views say that this passage describes unbelievers, whereas the third view says it describes believers. By examining the passage we should be able to decide which view is correct.

1. James' assertion 2:14

The Arminian interpretation of this verse (view one above) is as follows: If a person claims to be a Christian, but gives no evidence of true faith by the way he lives, he may never have been saved, or he may no longer be saved. One Reformed view (view two above) is that if a person claims to be a Christian, but gives no evidence of true faith by the way he lives, he was never saved.³ The third interpretation (view three above) is that if a person claims to be a Christian, but gives no evidence of true faith by the way he lives, there are two possibilities: He may not be saved, or he may be saved but he is not living by faith, not practicing his faith.

James just dealt with the Christian who professed to love others but by practicing personal favoritism demonstrated that he did not. Now he raised the larger issue of the believer who gives no evidence of his faith in the way he lives. He began by questioning the vitality of that faith. The form of this question in the Greek expects a negative response. If we translate it, Can that kind of faith save him? or, Can such faith save him? we may mislead the reader. The same construction exists in 1:2-4; 2:17, 18, 20, 22, 26; and 1 Corinthians 13:4 where the addition of "kind of" or "such" gives a more obviously improper translation. The presence of the definite article "the" with the abstract noun "faith" emphasizes the noun. James was saying that faith without works (which are "actions done in obedience to God"⁴) cannot save a person. Works are a condition for some kind of salvation.

¹Ibid., p. 152.

²E.g., Hodges; Wiersbe; Dillow; and R. T. Kendall, Once Saved, Always Saved, Charles C. Bing, Simply by Grace, pp. 87-90.

³For a response to advocates of lordship salvation that hold this position, see Robert N. Wilkin, "Can Faith Without Works Save? James 2:14," Grace Evangelical Society News 9:5 (September-October 1994):2-3.

⁴Moo, (2000), p. 123.

This statement seems to contradict Paul's affirmation that works are not a condition for salvation (e.g., Eph. 2:8-9; Rom. 11:6; et al.). However Paul and James were talking about different aspects of salvation. This is clear from James' earlier assertion that his Christian readers (1:18) would be able to save their "souls" (better "lives") if they obeyed God's Word (1:21).

"As someone has said, 'Paul and James do not stand face to face, fighting against each other, but they stand back to back, fighting opposite foes.'"¹

Jesus also gave similar warnings: that if His disciples did not continue to follow Him they could lose their "souls" (i.e., lives; cf. Matt. 16:24-26; Mark 3:4; 8:34-37; Luke 9:23-25). He used the same Greek word that James did to describe one's whole person or life (i.e., psyche). The translation "life" for "soul" may mislead us, however, into concluding that only the physical life is in view whenever we read this word (psyche). Rather it is the total person that psyche describes, not just our physical life or our eternal life (cf. 1 Pet. 1:9). Any aspect of our life may be in view, and the context will help us determine what it is.

"We are not saved by deeds; we are saved for deeds; these are the twin truths of the Christian life. And Paul's whole emphasis is on the first truth, and James's whole emphasis is on the second truth."²

In verse 14 James returned to his thought in 1:21-22 about saving one's life from death. His point here was that faith is no substitute for obedience. Orthodox faith without good works cannot protect the Christian from sin's deadly consequences in this life (i.e., a deadening of fellowship with God at least, and at most physical death; cf. 5:20; 1 John 5:16). That faith cannot save him from God's discipline of him as a believer. Good works in addition to faith are necessary for that kind of deliverance (salvation).

Many commentators believe that James was referring to eschatological salvation (i.e., salvation from eternal damnation). This interpretation obviously involves bringing works in as some type of condition for that aspect of salvation, which contradicts the clear revelation that salvation from hell is by grace alone.

¹McGee, 5:649.

²Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 87.

"It would be difficult to find a concept which is richer and more varied in meaning than the biblical concept of salvation. The breadth of salvation is so sweeping and its intended aim so magnificent that in many contexts the words used defy precise definition. Yet these difficulties have not thwarted numerous interpreters from assuming, often without any contextual justification, that the words used invariably mean 'deliverance from hell' or 'go to heaven when you die.' It may come as a surprise to many that this usage of 'salvation' (Gk. soteria) would have been the least likely meaning to come to the mind of a reader of the Bible in the first century. Indeed, in 812 usages of the various Hebrew words translated 'to save' or 'salvation' in the Old Testament, only 58 (7.1 percent) refer to eternal salvation."¹

2. James' illustration 2:15-16

Like he did before (vv. 2-4), James provided a concrete situation in order to illustrate his point (vv. 15-16). He envisioned a situation that may very well have taken place in his church in Jerusalem, where there were many poor saints (Rom. 15:25-31; 1 Cor. 16:3). All of the people in the illustration seem to be genuine Christians, in view of the terms James used to describe them (cf. "brothers and sisters" in 1:2; 2:1, 14; 3:1). The situation that he described highlights the absurdity of claiming vital faith (i.e., that one is putting his faith into practice) but at the same time not doing good works (i.e., not obeying the Word of God; cf. 1 John 3:17-18). A benediction cannot save a starving man from death. Only bread can do that.

One Greek scholar paraphrased verses 14-17 as follows:

¹Dillow, p. 112. Cf. pp. 187-94. See also Alfred Plummer, The General Epistles of St. James and St. Jude, p. 137; Martin Dibelius, James, p. 178; and W. Nicol, "Faith and Works in the Letter of James," Neotestamentica 9 (1975):7-24. For a short, popular discussion, see Robert N. Wilkin, "Repentance and Salvation, Part 2: The Doctrine of Repentance in the Old Testament," Journal of the Grace Evangelical Society 2 (Spring 1989):14.

"What good does it do, my Christian brothers, if someone among you says he has faith and yet does not act on that faith? Faith certainly cannot preserve his life, can it? It would be the same thing as if one of you spoke to some Christian brother or sister who was destitute of the necessities of life and you said, 'Go home peacefully and get warmed and filled.' But if you did not give them the very things they needed for bodily life, what good would it do? Would their lives be saved by your confident words? In the same way when faith stands all by itself, because you fail to act on it, your inactive faith is as dead as your useless words to your destitute Christian brother. It has no life-preserving power at all!"¹

3. James' restatement of his point 2:17

James was not saying that a person who responds to another Christian's need, as in verses 15-16, shows that he has failed to exercise saving faith and is devoid of eternal life. He was saying that faith, if works (i.e., obedience to the Word of God) do not accompany it, is dead (i.e., inactive).

"We can make statements in all sincerity of mind and emotion: 'I feel sorry for the poor; I don't condone racism.' But James will say, 'What good is that if you aren't doing something to help the poor or to heal the distrust and injustice between races?' Some Christians attempt a stance of personal belief without personal action, saying, for example, 'I personally disagree with abortion, but I won't try to change others' minds.' James persists in asking us: What are you doing to protect the victims—both the victimized baby and the victimized mother?"²

"Dead" does not mean non-existent but inactive, no longer vital, dormant, useless (cf. v. 14). This is a very important point.

"It has not usually been considered too deeply why James chose the term 'dead' to describe a faith that is not working. But the moment we relate this to the controlling theme of 'saving the life,' everything becomes plain. The issue that concerns James is an issue of life or death. (He is not discussing salvation from hell!) The truth which he has in mind is that of Proverbs: 'Righteousness tendeth to life ... he that pursueth evil pursueth it to his own death.' [Prov. 11:19; cf. Prov. 10:27; 12:28; 13:14; 19:16] Can a dead faith save the Christian from death? The question answers itself. The choice of the adjective 'dead' is perfectly suited to James' argument."¹

¹Zane C. Hodges, Dead Faith: What Is It? p. 15.

²Stulac, p. 120.

4. An objection 2:18

James next introduced an objection to his thesis that faith is dead (inoperative) without works. He put it in the mouth of a hypothetical objector. This literary device of objection and response, called a diatribe, was a common one that Paul also used (e.g., Rom. 9:19-20; 1 Cor. 15:35-36).² The form of the diatribe helps us identify that what follows is the statement of the objector, and what follows that is James' response to the objector.

The NIV, by its use of quotation marks, has the objector saying only the first part of this verse, "You have faith; I have deeds," and James responding in the last part of the verse.³ The NASB has the objector saying the whole verse. Which is correct? There were no punctuation marks in the Greek text, so we have to determine this issue on the basis of what makes the most sense. The objector seems to be making a point by way of argument rather than making a simple statement. This fact seems clear from the context, in which James responds with a rebuttal (vv. 19-23). Consequently I prefer the NASB punctuation of this verse.

The objector claims that good works are the necessary sign of saving faith. He says in effect: You cannot prove that you have faith unless you have works, but because I have works you can see that I have faith.⁴ This is the argument that many evangelicals have used: the necessary evidence that a person has been saved (justified, declared righteous by God) is his good works (progressive sanctification). If he is not doing good works, he is ¹Hodges, The Gospel ..., p. 27. See also Don Anderson, James: Running Uphill into the Wind, pp. 124, 134.

²See Hiebert, James, p. 131; and Sidebottom, p. 1.

³NIV refers to The Holy Bible: New International Version.

⁴Cf. Adamson, p. 124.

therefore unsaved. Good works always give evidence of saving faith, they say. But if this view is true, why did Jesus teach His disciples that some who are in Him bear no fruit (John 15:2, 6)?

The idea that evidence of sanctification must be present before the sinner can have full assurance of his justification is one that certain Reformed preachers after the time of John Calvin popularized. This idea is neither scriptural, nor did John Calvin hold it. Theodore Beza in Geneva, and William Perkins in England, were leading figures in the Calvinists' departure from John Calvin's own teaching concerning faith and assurance.¹

The basis of our assurance that we are saved is primarily the promise of God in Scripture (John 1:12; 3:16, 36; 5:24; 6:47; 10:27-29; 20:31; et al.). It is not the presence of good works (fruit) in our lives. Jesus taught that some branches that are connected to the vine do not bear fruit (Matt. 13:22; Mark 4:7; Luke 8:14; John 15:2, 6). Nevertheless they still share in the life of the vine. It seems clear that every true believer experiences a radical transformation in his life when he trusts Jesus Christ as his Savior (Gal. 2:20; Rom. 6:13; Eph. 5:8; Col. 1:13; et al.). But the Scriptures do not say that every true believer's lifestyle will inevitably experience external transformation. The outward manifestation of the new life within depends on the believer's response to God's will.

"The tree shows its life by its fruits, but it was alive before either fruits or even leaves appeared."²

"To show faith to man, works in some form or other are needed: we are justified judicially by God (Rom. 8:33), meritoriously, by Christ (Isa. 53:11), mediately, by faith (Rom. 5:1); evidentially, by works."³

Carnal Christians (1 Cor. 3:1-4) are those who choose to indulge the flesh rather than submitting to the Holy Spirit's control. Fruit is the outward evidence of inner life. Just as some fruit trees bear little or no fruit, it is possible for some genuine Christians to bear little or no external evidence of their eternal life. The Holy Spirit produces inner transformation in every believer. Normally He will produce outer transformation as well, unless the ¹See R. T. Kendall, Calvin and English Calvinism to 1649; idem., Once Saved ..., pp. 207-17; and M. Charles Bell, Calvin and Scottish Theology: The Doctrine of Assurance.

²Jamieson, et al., p. 1453.

³Ibid.

believer quenches and grieves Him while He seeks to manifest the life of Christ through him to others.

5. James' rebuttal 2:19-23

2:19 James refuted the argument of the objector that is stated in verse 18. Genuine faith does not always result in good works. The demons believe that what God has revealed about Himself is true. The Shema (Deut. 6:4) was and is the pious Jew's daily confession of his faith. In spite of the truth that "God is one," the sovereign Lord over all creation, the demons continue to practice evil works. They understand and believe what their behavior will bring upon them, but rather than turning from their evil ways, they only shudder as they anticipate their inevitable judgment.

I think James selected the demons as an illustration because they are the most extreme and clear example of beings whose belief is correct but whose behavior is not. He did not select them because they are lost, which they are. Throughout this book James was speaking to genuine Christians (cf. vv. 14, 15, 21, 23, 25, et al.). Just like the demons, Christians can persist in rebelling against God's will, even though they know that they will stand before the judgment seat of Christ one day (2 Cor. 5:10).

Some people have concluded that James' reason for using the demons as an illustration was to show that intellectual assent to the truth is not enough. In order to experience regeneration, a person must not only accept the gospel message as true but also rely on the Savior to save him. Whereas it is true that intellectual assent to the facts of the gospel is not adequate for regeneration, that does not appear to be the point that James was making in this illustration.

His point seems to be that correct behavior does not always result from correct belief (cf. 1:26-27; 4:17). They did in Abraham's case (vv. 21-22), but not in the case of the demons. Further evidence that this is the correct conclusion is that what James said that the demons believe is not equivalent to the gospel message. James was not talking about what is necessary to become a Christian.

"... this verse which is often quoted to show that some creatures can believe but not be saved is irrelevant to the issue of salvation, for it says only that demons are monotheists."¹

Some scholars believe that the objector is speaking in verse 19 as well as in verse 18.² Some of them base this conclusion on the fact that the Greek word choris (translated without, v. 18) is ek (translated by) in some ancient Greek manuscripts. Most Greek scholars believe choris is the proper word and that James is speaking in verse 19.³ I agree with them on this point.

2:20 James thought his objector's argument was foolish. He still asserted that without good works a person's faith in God is useless—not non-existent, but useless (Gr. argos, ineffectual, lit. idle, unemployed; cf. Matt. 20:3, 6).

A Christian who has stopped living by faith, day by day, is similar to a person who has a non-functioning organ in his body. Just as the organ is dead, so the faith of such a Christian is dead—useless. Furthermore, his dead faith will contribute to his physical death, like a dead organ will shorten physical life.

James then proceeded to explain what he meant by useless in verses 21-23. Note how often James said that he was writing about the uselessness of faith unaccompanied by works, not the absence of faith unaccompanied by works (1:26; 2:14, 16, 20).

2:21 This verse at first seems to contradict other verses that say that God declared Abraham righteous when Abraham believed God's promise to him (Gen. 15:1-6; Rom. 4:1-5). The solution to the problem lies in the meaning of the word justified. This word always means to declare someone righteous in the sight of the law, not to make someone righteous in his or her conduct (cf. Exod. 23:7; Deut. 25:1; 1 Kings 8:32). The failure to define justification biblically is what has led some Reformed interpreters to conclude that everyone who is truly justified will inevitably behave righteously.

¹Charles C. Ryrie, So Great Salvation, p. 122.

²E.g., Mayor, p. 101; R. F. Weymouth, The New Testament in Modern Speech, pp. 561-62; and Zane C. Hodges, "Light on James Two from Textual Criticism," Bibliotheca Sacra 120:480 (October-December 1963):343-47.

³See Martin, p. 89.

The NIV translation "considered righteous" is a bit misleading (cf. v. 25). Abraham was declared righteous more than once. Most interpreters understand the first scriptural statement of his justification as describing his new birth, to use the New Testament term (Gen. 15:6). This was when God declared Abraham righteous. James explained that about 20 years after Abraham was declared righteous by God he was justified again. Scripture consistently teaches that believers whom God declares righteous never lose their righteous standing before God (Rom. 5:1; 8:1; et al.). They do not need to be saved again.

Abraham's subsequent, second justification evidently refers to a second declaration of his righteousness. James said this second time Abraham's works declared him righteous. They gave testimony (bore witness) to his faith.¹ Works do not always evidence faith (v. 19), but sometimes they do. They do so whenever a person who has become a believer by faith continues to live by his faith. Abraham is a good example of a believer whose good works (obedience to God) bore witness to his righteousness. He continued to live by faith just as he had been declared righteous by faith.

"Surely it is clear that he [i.e., James] himself is speaking of the declaration, not the imputation, of righteousness."²

"The justification of which Paul speaks is different from that spoken of by James; the one speaks of ¹See Victor P. Hamilton, The Book of Genesis: Chapters 1—17, p. 441; and Robertson, 6:37.

²John Calvin, Institutes of the Christian Religion, 3:17:12.

our persons being justified before God, the other speaks of our faith being justified before men ..."¹

2:22 Abraham's faith was perfected by his works in the sense that his works made his faith stronger. This is another way of expressing the same idea that James stated in 1:2-4. Growth toward maturity comes as we persevere in the will of God when we encounter trials. When God spared Isaac's life, Abraham's faith became much stronger than it had been. A careful reading of the Abraham narrative in Genesis reveals that patriarch's growth in faith.

"The faith which justifies ... can have an active and vital role in the life of the obedient believer. As with Abraham, it can be the dynamic for superb acts of obedience. In the process, faith itself can be 'perfected.' The Greek word suggests development and motivation. Faith is thus nourished and strengthened by works."²

The singular "you" in this verse in the Greek text indicates that James was still addressing his objector.

2:23 Genesis 15:6 was fulfilled when Abraham offered Isaac in the sense that Abraham's faith became abundantly clear on that occasion. What God had previously said about Abraham became obviously and outwardly true when the patriarch trusted and obeyed God when he was tested.

"In the sacrifice of Isaac was shown the full meaning of the word (Gen. 15:6) spoken ... years before in commendation of Abraham's belief in the promise of a child."³

James seems to have included the fact that God called Abraham His friend for the following reason: He wanted to show that continued obedient faith, not just initial saving faith, ¹Henry, p. 1933. See also Paul D. Weaver, "James," in Surveying Hebrews through Revelation, pp. 41-42.

²Hodges, The Gospel ..., pp. 29-30.

³Mayor, p. 104.

is what makes a person God's intimate friend (cf. 4:4; 2 Chron. 20:7; Isa. 41:8; John 14:21; 15:14).

"When a man is justified by faith he finds an unqualified acceptance before God ... (Rom. 4:6). But only God can see this spiritual transaction. When, however, a man is justified by works he achieves an intimacy with God that is manifest to men. He can then be called 'the friend of God,' even as Jesus said, 'You are my friends if you do whatever I command you' (John 15:14)."¹

Why did James bring Abraham into his argument? Abraham is a clear example that it is possible to be declared righteous by God but not inevitably or necessarily to be declared righteous by one's works. It was only as Abraham continued to live by faith (continued to trust and obey God) that, about 20 years after his justification by faith in God, his works declared that he was righteous. By continuing to trust and obey God, as Abraham did, James' Christian readers could also validate their justification by faith in God by their good works—and thus become true friends of God.

6. James' final argument 2:24-26

2:24 The use of the plural you in this verse, in the Greek text, shows that James had completed his response to the objector. He was now addressing his readers directly again (cf. vv. 14-17).

Works do declare us righteous (Gr. present passive indicative of dikaioo) in the sense that our works testify to onlookers that we have exercised saving faith. They are the external fruit that bears witness to the eternal life within. However James previously said that not every believer will bear visible fruit (v. 17; cf. John 15:2). Such a believer's faith is not productive but dead. Nevertheless he has faith. Some unbelievers appear to bear the fruit of saving faith, but God will one day expose their wheat as tares (Matt. 13:30).

¹Hodges, The Gospel ..., p. 31. See also Fanning, p. 429.

"... Paul and James are best understood as addressing quite dissimilar situations ... Whereas Paul's audience is in danger of relying on 'works' for salvation, James' readers are excusing themselves from good works, thereby showing only a faith that is dead ..."¹

One writer argued for the view that the vindication (justification) in view here is universal (for all believers) and is stated in a salvific [having to do with eternal salvation] context.² My view is that the vindication is only before others, and is not in a salvific context.

2:25 James could have ended his argument with the revered patriarch Abraham, but he chose to add the illustration of Rahab, the redeemed prostitute.³

"Rahab ... is superbly suited to tie the strands of his thoughts together. This passage had begun, as we have seen, with an allusion to his theme of 'saving the life' (2:14; 1:21). Not surprisingly, therefore, Rahab is selected as a striking example of a person whose physical life was 'saved' precisely because she had works."⁴

Apparently Rahab trusted in God before the spies ever arrived at her door (cf. Josh. 2:9-13). Rather than being originally part of the Israelite nation, she was a proselyte to Judaism. Thus, with these two examples, James showed the necessity of works for believers, regardless of one's background and origins. Abraham and Rahab were poles apart:

"The contrast is neat: Abraham, a major Bible figure; Rahab, a minor participant. Abraham the father of the faithful; Rahab a foreigner. Abraham the respected; Rahab the disreputable. Abraham a ¹Martin, p. 95.

²C. Ryan Jenkins, "Faith and Works in Paul and James," Bibliotheca Sacra 159:633 (January-March 2002):62-78.

³Blue, p. 826.

⁴Hodges, The Gospel ..., p. 32.

man; Rahab a woman. As so often, the contrast is intended to alert us to the fact that a fully comprehensive statement is being made—as it were, covering the situation all the way from Abraham to Rahab and back again. The primary works of faith, then, are the works of Abraham and Rahab and they apply to all without exception. What was the work of Abraham? He held nothing back from God. God said, 'I want your son' and Abraham 'rose early in the morning' (Gn. 22:3) in prompt obedience. What was the work of Rahab? She reached out and took into her own care those who were needy and helpless, regardless of the cost to herself."¹

2:26 Faith without works is as dead as a body without a human spirit. It is of no practical value. This is James' final illustration and affirmation on the subject. Our faith becomes only dead orthodoxy when we stop obeying God. Vital (living) faith then becomes dead (useless) faith. Both a dead body and dead faith were alive at one time.

"Does James then contradict Paul's doctrine of full grace, or John's insistence on faith as the single condition for eternal life? Far from it. But neither does he offer support to the widespread notion that a 'dead faith' cannot exist in the life of a Christian. Ironically, that is exactly what he is warning against. Thus the misconstruction of his words has not only bred unnecessary confusion about the terms for eternal life, but it has also deprived the church of a much needed and salutary [beneficial] warning. The dangers of a dying faith are real. But they do not include hell, and nothing James writes suggests this. Nevertheless, sin remains a deadly nemesis to Christian experience which can end our physical lives themselves. To that, the wisdom of the Old Testament adds its witness to the warnings of James. And if a man is to be saved from such a consequence, he must have works."¹

¹Motyer, pp. 115-116. Paragraph division omitted.

"Never once does James question whether the rich—or poor—have been saved. Neither does he admonish them in such a way that should cause them to question whether they have been saved. He never says, for example, 'The trouble with you people is that you are not saved.' He does not come forward with a plan of salvation; he does not warn them of a false assurance; he does not go over the basis of saving faith."²

The key to understanding this passage is a correct understanding of what dead faith is. James used the word dead (vv. 17, 26) as a synonym for useless (vv. 14, 16, 20). He was not saying the person with dead faith has no faith, that he is unsaved. He meant that the person with dead faith has saving faith but he is not living by faith now. His faith has no vital effect on the way he presently lives. He is not trusting and obeying God day by day. Useless means of no practical value; it does not mean nonexistent. Other important terms to define correctly in this passage are justify and save. Justify (vv. 21, 24) means to declare righteous, not to make righteous. And save (v. 14) is an umbrella term that covers justification, sanctification, and glorification, not just justification. Here sanctification is in view.

"The faith which is mentioned in this section [2:14-26] can be presupposed in every Christian ... [James'] intention is not dogmatically oriented, but practically oriented: he wishes to admonish the Christians to practice their faith, i.e. their Christianity, by works."³

To summarize, I believe that what James wrote in verses 14-26 means this: Good works are not necessary to keep us from going to hell. However, they are necessary to keep us from falling under God's disciplinary punishment, which may even result in premature physical death. It is possible for a Christian not to use his or her faith, to stop walking by faith. In such a case his or her faith is of no practical use here and now. Therefore we who are Christians should be careful to continue, day by day, to keep trusting and ¹Hodges, The Gospel ..., p. 33. Paragraph division omitted. See also idem, The Hungry ..., pp. 81-95.

²Kendall, Once Saved ..., p. 208. Cf. Chitwood, Salvation of ..., pp. 45-54.

³Dibelius, p. 178. The italics are his.

obeying God. It is possible for a Christian to exercise saving faith and then to stop walking by faith. That is what James is warning us to avoid. He is dealing with sanctification primarily, not justification, here and throughout this epistle. This is Christian life teaching, not teaching on how to become a Christian.

"James' emphasis on faith alone shows that he affirms the necessity of faith; what he is opposing is a faith that denies the obligation to obey Christ as Lord."¹

When Jesus said, "You will know them by their fruits" (Matt. 7:16, 20), He was giving a general way of evaluating people, not that a person's works always and inevitably indicate his or her salvation. If that were the case, then every time a Christian sins, he or she would be giving evidence that he or she is unsaved. Works are a fairly reliable guide to a person's salvation, but not a completely reliable guide. There are many exceptions (cf. Jesus' parable of the wheat and the tares; Matt. 13:24-41). Some Christians live in a state of carnality for years—and even die in it. Nevertheless, they go to heaven when they die because they once trusted in Christ, He forgave their sins, and He declared them righteous in His sight.

I believe James' point was that we should continue to live by faith and to trust God day by day, not just to receive eternal life by faith. Many Christians trust God very little as they live day by day. An evidence of this is their prayer life. In this chapter James said that partiality (favoritism) may indicate that one is not living by faith. Good works are normal for a Christian, but they are not automatic or inevitable. Colossians 2:6 says, "as you have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk in Him." Titus 3:8 says that those who have believed in God should "be careful to engage in good deeds." 2 Peter 1:5-7 says, "applying all diligence, in your faith supply moral excellence, and in your moral excellence, knowledge, and in your knowledge, self-control, and in your self-control, perseverance, and in your perseverance, godliness, and in your godliness, brotherly kindness, and in your brotherly kindness, love."² ¹Stulac, p. 116. See also Robert N. Wilkin, "Another View of Faith and Works in James 2," Journal of the Grace Evangelical Society 15:29 (Autumn 2002):3-21.

²See also Michael D. Fiorello, "The Ethical Implication of Holiness in James 2," Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 55:3 (September 2012):557-72.

IV. SPEECH AND DIVINE WISDOM CH. 3

One of the most important aspects of our works, which James had been discussing, is our words. We conduct much of our work with words. We also may express partiality with our words. James next gave his readers directions concerning their words in order to help them understand and apply God's will to this area of their lives.

"The more the idea prevailed, that faith, without corresponding obedience, was all that is needful, the more men would eagerly press forward to teach: as indeed the Church has found in all ages when such an opinion has become prevalent: for then teachers and preachers of their own appointing have rapidly multiplied."¹

A. CONTROLLING THE TONGUE 3:1-12

It is particularly the misuse of the tongue in Christian worship, teaching, and church life that James addressed (cf. 1 Cor. 12:3; 14:27-39). From the subject of idle faith James proceeded to discuss idle speech.

"... in his usual 'rondo' manner [James] returns to the theme of speech (1:19, 26) and warns his true Christians of the dangers of the tongue ..."²

"It [this chapter] is also connected with that overvaluation of theory as compared with practice which formed the subject of the last chapter."³

"Those in his line of sight are evidently leaders who are summoned to control and guide the course of the church's life and destiny. Hence the twin imagery of the horse's bit (v 3) and the ship's rudder (v 4)."⁴ ¹Alford, 4:2:302.

²Adamson, p. 138.

³Mayor, p. 107.

⁴Martin, p. 104.

1. The negative warning 3:1

As he did in the previous two chapters, James introduced a new subject with a command (cf. 1:2; 2:1).

Every Christian is responsible to teach (share, impart to) others what God has revealed in His Word (Matt. 28:19; Heb. 5:12). However James was evidently speaking of people becoming teachers—like the rabbis in his day who were professional teachers. He may have been cautioning those who were considering teaching in the church and suggesting that some who were ministering in this capacity unworthily should step down.¹

"Teachers are necessary, but incompetent and unworthy ones do much harm."²

The Jews regarded teachers (rabbis) with great awe and gave them much honor in James' day (cf. Matt. 23:8). The synagogue service allowed opportunity for the men in the congregation to rise and address the rest of the assembly (cf. Acts 13:15). The Christians carried this opportunity over into the meetings of the early church (cf. 1 Cor. 14:26-33). Consequently there were many in James' audience, who, though not qualified with ability, aspired to teach others publicly for the sake of prestige or some other motive. James warned that someone will judge a teacher more strictly than a non-teacher, because a Christian teacher presumably knows the truth and claims to live by it. That someone might be a listener to the teaching, but He will definitely be God.³

"This is not an attack upon the office of the teacher or the teaching function, for James at once identifies himself as a teacher. Rather, he is seeking to restrain the rush to teach on the part of those not qualified."⁴

¹Ibid., p. 107.

²Robertson, 6:39.

³Cedar, p. 69.

⁴Hiebert, James, p. 185.

"Any teacher runs the risk of becoming 'Sir Oracle.' No profession is more liable to beget spiritual and intellectual pride."¹

2. The reason for the warning 3:2

The person who speaks much is going to err ("stumble") much in his or her speech, because the tongue (vv. 5-12) is the hardest member of the body to control. No one has been able to master it yet, except Jesus Christ. Yet spiritual maturity requires a tamed tongue (cf. Titus 1:11).

"Although not all sins laid to the account of one person are necessarily the same as those shared by others, all persons have at least one sin in common, namely, the sin of the tongue."²

3. Examples of the danger 3:3-6

3:3 It is the same with horses as it is with humans. If we can control the tongue, we can bring the whole animal under control.

"Nothing seems to trip a believer more than a dangling tongue."³

3:4 This second illustration adds another element. The controlled tongue can overcome great obstacles. James had undoubtedly observed many ships on the Sea of Galilee, and perhaps on the Mediterranean, driven by strong winds, yet directed by a very small rudder.

3:5 The two previous illustrations share a characteristic that James pointed out next. Though small and comparatively insignificant, the tongue can produce great change out of all proportion to its size. The bit, the rudder, and the tongue, even though they are small, all have power to direct. This interpretation seems preferable to the one that takes verse 5a as a statement that the tongue can make pretentious claims. James did not state that idea previously, but this sentence claims a connection with what precedes.

¹Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 94. His allusion is to William Shakespear's The Merchant of Venice, Act 1, Scene 1, Line 93: "I am Sir Oracle, and when I ope my lips let no dog bark!"

²Martin, p. 109.

³Blue, p. 827.

The tongue has as much destructive power as a spark that can ignite a large forest. It is petite but powerful.

3:6 Fire is a good illustration of the tongue's effect. It is potentially a world of unrighteousness, perverse as well as powerful.

"... all the evil characteristics of a fallen world, its covetousness, its idolatry, its blasphemy, its lust, its rapacious greed, find expression through the tongue."¹

"From the context it seems best to accept that James thinks of the tongue as a vast system of iniquity."²

The tongue is the gate through which the evil influences of hell can spread like fire to inflame all the areas of life that we touch. This is the only place in the New Testament where the word hell (Gr. geennes) occurs outside the Synoptic Gospels. Here the entire body (Gr. soma) represents the whole person. However, it may also allude to the church as well.³

4. The uncontrollable nature of the tongue 3:7-8

3:7 Human beings have brought all the major forms of animal life under control. For example, people have taught lions, tigers, and monkeys to jump through hoops. They have taught parrots and canaries to speak and sing. They have charmed snakes. They have trained dolphins and whales to perform various tricks and tasks. The ancients took pride in the ability of humans to tame and control the animal kingdom.⁴ Tamed is perhaps too strong a word. Subdued might be a better

¹Tasker, p. 76.

²Hiebert, James, p. 195.

³Martin, pp. 111, 112, and 123.

⁴Ibid., p. 116.

translation of the Greek word (damazo). All animals have been controlled but not necessarily domesticated.

3:8 Apart from the Holy Spirit's help no human being has ever been able to subdue his or her own tongue. It is much more dangerous than any deadly animal because it never rests, and it can destroy simply with words (cf. Ps. 62:4). Fire, animals, and the tongue all have power to destroy (cf. v. 5).

5. The inconsistency of the tongue 3:9-12

3:9 We honor God with our words, but then we turn right around and dishonor other people with what we say. This is inconsistent because people are made in the image of God (Gen. 1:27).

"The lesson is that he who curses him who was made in the image of God implicitly curses the prototype as well."¹

"To bless God is the sublimest function of the human tongue; thrice daily the devout Jew recited 'the Eighteen Benedictions,' with their ending 'Blessed art Thou, O God.'"²

"It was the pious practice among the Jews, both in speaking and in writing, to add 'Blessed [be] He' after each utterance of the name of God. No doubt, the readers of this epistle still continued this practice whenever God was mentioned."³

3:10 Not only is this contradictory phenomenon ("from the same mouth come both blessing and cursing") contrary to the will of God, it is also contrary to the natural order of things.

¹Oesterley, 4:454.

²Adamson, p. 146.

³Hiebert, James, p. 201. Cf. Oesterley, 4:453; Mark 14:61.

"Although the believer has in the indwelling Holy Spirit the potential for controlling the tongue, he may not be appropriating this potential."¹

"To the person who speaks praise to God in the worship service and then abuses people verbally at home or at work, James commands, 'Purify your speech through the week.' With the person who says, 'Oh, I know I talk too much,' and laughs it off, James is not amused. He insists, 'Be quick to listen, slow to speak.' By the person who boasts, 'I always speak my mind, no matter who gets hurt,' James is not impressed. He commands, 'Discipline your speaking.' Of the person who says, 'I know I gossip too much, but I just can't help it,' James still requires, 'Control your tongue.' Of the person who is in the habit of speaking with insults, ridicule or sarcasm, James demands, 'Change your speech habits.' He expects discipline to be happening in the life of a Christian. Any Christian can ask for the grace needed, for God gives good gifts (1:17) and gives them generously (1:5). There is, then, no justification for corrupt habits of speech in our churches today."²

"... the Bible nowhere places much value on knowledge that remains merely cerebral or credal [sic]. Nothing is known until it also reshapes the life."³

"The reference is not to the use of profanity in vulgar speech but apparently seems to envision angry disputes and slanderous remarks in inner-church party strife (cf. 4:1-2, 11-12)."⁴

¹Burdick, p. 188.

²Stulac, p. 130.

³Motyer, p. 130.

⁴Hiebert, James, p. 201.

3:11-12 Illustrations highlight this natural inconsistency (cf. Matt. 7:16). A water fountain can yield only one kind of water: fresh or not fresh. A tree can only produce fruit of its own kind. A salt spring cannot produce fresh water any more than a fallen human nature can naturally produce pure words. A fountain, a tree, and the tongue all have power to delight (cf. vv. 5, 8).

"Small and influential, the tongue must be controlled; satanic and infectious, the tongue must be corralled; salty and inconsistent, the tongue must be cleansed."¹

James was dealing, as in the preceding chapters, with root causes of human behavior. His teaching contrasts strongly with that of the religious teachers whom Jesus rebuked for their superficiality and hypocrisy. James was, of course, picturing human behavior as it is naturally apart from the sanctifying influence of the Holy Spirit.

B. CONTROLLING THE MIND 3:13-18

As in the previous chapters, James began his discussion of human speech with a practical exhortation and then continued to deal with increasingly basic issues. He spoke next of the importance of controlling one's mind in order to enable his readers to understand how to control their tongues. Wisdom in the mind affects one's use of his or her tongue. Note the key words wise and wisdom (vv. 13, 17) that bracket the thought of this section, as well of the prominence of the words peace-loving and peace that conclude it (vv. 17, 18).

1. The importance of humility 3:13

The real qualifications of a teacher (v. 1) are wisdom (the ability to view life from God's perspective) and understanding (mental perception and comprehension). James may have had the Old Testament sage in mind.² We can perceive understanding in others quite easily, but wisdom is more difficult to identify. James said to look at a person's behavior if you want to see if he or she is wise. The wisdom that James had in mind did not result so much in what one thinks or says but in what one does.¹

¹Blue, p. 828.

²See John E. Johnson, "The Old Testament Offices as Paradigm for Pastoral Identity," Bibliotheca Sacra 152:606 (April-June 1995):182-200.

One of the marks of wisdom is gentleness (or meekness, humility). The Greek word prauteti, that James used here, occurs in non-biblical literature to describe a horse that someone had broken and had trained to submit to a bridle.² It pictures strength under control, specifically the Holy Spirit's control. The evidence of this attitude is a deliberate placing of oneself under divine authority. The only way to control the tongue is to place one's mind deliberately under the authority of God and to let Him control it (have His way with it; cf. Matt. 11:27; 2 Cor. 10:1). James' concept of wisdom was Hebraic rather than Greek, moral more than intellectual (cf. 1:5).

"The problem seems to be that some self-styled chief people, thinking they were endowed with superior wisdom and understanding, had divided the church because of their teaching, which betrayed a misuse of the tongue."³

"The pride of knowledge has always been the besetting sin of professional teachers."⁴

"It is very difficult to be a teacher or a preacher and to remain humble; but however difficult it is, it is absolutely necessary."⁵

2. The importance of graciousness 3:14-16

3:14 Bitter jealousy and selfish ambition are motives that must not inhabit the heart of a teacher or he will find himself saying things that he should not. These are attitudes toward others and self that are the antithesis of graciousness, which seeks the welfare of others before self.

"Bitter envy (v. 14). The Greek word for 'bitter,' pikros, is the same word James uses to describe the bitter water which comes from the spring ¹James H. Ropes, A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Epistle of St. James, p. 244.

²Barclay, New Testament ..., pp. 241-42.

³Martin, p. 128.

⁴Wessel, p. 1436.

⁵Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 107.

(3:11). The word denotes a sharp, pungent characteristic. Envy is zelos, which can also be translated as jealousy or zeal. In verse 16, James contends that such envy leads to confusion and every evil thing. Self-seeking (v. 14). This word in Greek is eritheia, which is better translated as 'strife.' The most graphic translation of the word would be 'faction' or those involved in 'party split.' This is the expression of mankind's sinful nature which is preoccupied with the indulgence of wanting our own way—doing our own thing. It creates the 'we-they' syndrome with which we are all so familiar. It is selfish ambition at its worst."¹

Jealousy and ambition are manifestations of arrogance (Gr. katakauchaomai, boasting), and they result in promoting self rather than the truth that the teacher is responsible to communicate. Lying (Gr. pseudomai) against the truth means teaching untrue things, things that oppose the truth. Those who boast of wisdom are not following God, because humility does not mark their lives. This is as true of Christians as it is of non-Christians.

3:15 This type of so-called wisdom, which springs from jealousy and ambition, does not have its source in the fear of the Lord. It comes from the earthly spirit of this world (cf. 2:1-7). It consists of only what is natural and excludes the supernatural influence of God's Spirit. Furthermore, it is demonic: demon-like in its deception, hypocrisy, and evil. Note the correspondence between earthly, natural, demonic and the three spiritual enemies of people: the world, the flesh, and the devil.

"Wisdom is not measured by degrees but by deeds. It is not a matter of acquiring truth in lectures but of applying truth to life."²

¹Cedar, p. 74. Paragraph division omitted.

²Blue, p. 828.

3:16 God is not the God of disorder (Gr. akatastasia, commotion, tumult), but of order and peace (Gen. 1; 1 Cor. 14:33). He opposes every evil thing (1 John 1:5). Therefore, ungracious jealousy and selfish ambition are not a part of the wisdom that He provides.

"There is a kind of person who is undoubtedly clever; he has an acute brain and a skilful [sic] tongue; but his effect in any committee, in any Church, in any group, is to cause trouble, to drive people apart, to foment strife, to make trouble, to disturb personal relationships. It is a sobering thing to remember that the wisdom that that man possesses is devilish rather than divine, and that such a man is engaged on Satan's work and not on God's work."¹

3. The importance of loving peace 3:17-18

3:17 In contrast, the wisdom from above that God gives has several characteristics: It is pure (Gr. hagnos), meaning free of the defilements mentioned. It is peace-loving (Gr. eirenikos). It is gentle (Gr. epieikes) or considerate of others. It is reasonable (Gr. eupeithes), that is, open to reason and willing to yield to reasonable requests. It is full of mercy (Gr. eleos) in that it is actively sympathetic to the needy, and it is full of good fruits (Gr. karpos, good works). It is impartial (Gr. adiakritos): single-minded in its devotion to God, rather than double-minded. It is, finally, without hypocrisy (Gr. anupokritos), namely, true to appearances.

"Thus 'purity' is not just one quality among others but the key to them all."²

3:18 People who are committed to making peace must teach the Word of God peacefully in order to reap a harvest of righteousness (cf. 1:20). That good fruit will not come if teachers sow it in words and ways that inflame and antagonize people (cf. 1 Tim. 5:1-2; 2 Tim. 2:14, 24-26).

¹Barclay, The Letters ..., p. 110.

²Adamson, p. 154.

"The wisdom from above is concerned with justice and peace."¹

"To 'raise a harvest of righteousness' demands a certain kind of climate. A crop of righteousness cannot be produced in the climate of bitterness and self-seeking. Righteousness will grow only in a climate of peace."²

"Winsome speech comes from a wise spirit. A controlled tongue is possible only with cultured thought. A mouth filled with praise results from a mind filled with purity."³

To restate James' thought in this chapter: our words are very important as we seek to carry out the ministry that God has called us to fulfill. We cannot control our tongues easily. Therefore we should not be too quick to take on a teaching ministry. The only One who can control our tongues is God, who alone can give us the wisdom that is from above. The marks of the wisdom that He provides are humility, graciousness, and peace.

James warns against anything that does not bear the fruit of good works: unfruitful religion (1:25-26), unfruitful faith (2:26), and unfruitful wisdom (3:17-18).

V. CONFLICTS AND HUMBLE SUBMISSION CH. 4

In this chapter James gave direction to his readers in order to encourage and enable them to live at peace with God, others, and themselves. This chapter ties in closely to chapter 1 (cf. 4:6 and 1:5, 21; 4:8b and 1:6-8, 15, 21, 27; 4:9-10 and 1:21).

¹Cedar, p. 76.

²Burdick, pp. 191-92.

³Blue, p. 829.

A. INTERPERSONAL AND INNER PERSONAL TENSIONS 4:1-10

"James 4 continues the same topic of strife, and addresses now not only the teachers of 3:14 but also the rest of the brotherhood who are in similar sin: strife springs from within (vv. 1-3) and is fostered by worldliness; love of the world and love of God cannot coexist (vv. 4-6); Christians must resist the devil and draw near to God (vv. 7-10)."¹

1. The source of conflict 4:1

As in the previous chapters, James began this one with a clear introduction of a practical problem that his readers faced. He had just been referring to the importance of avoiding strife (3:14-16) and loving peace (3:13, 17-18). Now he attacked the problem of conflict ("quarrels and conflicts") within and among believers.

"James had in mind not wars between nations but quarrels and factions among Christians."²

The absence of the warm address "brothers and sisters" (cf. 1:2; 2:1; 3:1) indicates the severity of this section and the one to follow (v. 13).

In view of the terrible nature of the sins mentioned, and the absence of the affectionate address here, some commentators have concluded that James wrote this exhortation to unbelieving Jews.³ However Christians have been guilty of all the sins mentioned. They are not beyond the capability of believers. Furthermore, the absence of "brothers and sisters" does not prove that James was writing to Jews who were not his Christian brethren. Rather it is more natural to take his frequent use of "brothers and sisters" throughout this epistle as evidence that he was addressing his Christian brethren in every section.

"The sudden transition from the beautiful picture in 3:17-18 of a life governed by heavenly wisdom to the appalling picture in the opening verses of chapter 4 is startling, but it demonstrates effectively the need for this vigorous rebuke now administered to the spirit of worldliness."¹

¹Adamson, p. 165.

²Wessel, p. 1436.

³E.g., Gaebelein, 4:2:29-30.

"The spirit of worldliness has always been a problem for the church; it manifests itself in varied and often subtle ways. James discusses its manifestation in the lives of believers in four different areas. Worldliness reveals itself in their selfish strife (4:1-12), in an attitude of presumptuous self-sufficiency in business planning (4:13-17), in wrong reactions to experiences of injustice (5:1-11), and in the use of self-serving oaths (5:12)."²

Quarrels (Gr. polemoi, wars) could refer to disputes between several or many individuals, whereas conflicts (Gr. machoi, battles) probably describes the tensions within one individual or between a few individuals. Both types of conflict, large and small, are the enemies of peace. James was using diatribe (cf. 2:18), so "among you" has a general reference aimed at no particular group.³

Using a rhetorical question James identified pleasures as the source of both kinds of conflict. Pleasures are satisfied desires (cf. Luke 8:14; Titus 3:3). James did not say that the pleasures war against each other in the believer but that, like a besieging army, they inevitably assail him or her. People often think that most conflicts arise because of external circumstances, but James traced their root to internal lusts. The satisfaction of desire, which is what pleasure is, is something people spend vast quantities of time, money, and energy to obtain. Am I spending these resources to satisfy my personal desires or God's desires primarily? Our personal desires are part of our human nature, and we will never escape their pull as long as we live in our present bodies. Nevertheless they must not dominate our lives. God's desires must do that (Matt. 6:33a). Our culture glorifies the satisfaction of personal desire, and it is the primary pursuit of most people, including most Christians.

¹Hiebert, James, p. 219.

²Ibid., p. 220.

³Sidebottom, p. 51.

2. The explanation of the conflict 4:2-3

4:2 The ultimate and worst case result of lust, a strong desire that a person might or might not satisfy, is murder. We can see this throughout human history, all the way from Cain (Gen. 4), through David and Ahab (cf. 2 Sam. 11; 1 Kings 21) down to the present day. James was probably not accusing his readers literally of murder, though at least one scholar believed that he was.¹ He was probably reminding them of the serious ultimate consequences of living merely in order to satisfy personal desires.

"In the context of forceful words such as polemoi ('wars') and machai ('battles'), it seems better to take phoneuete ('you kill') as hyperbole for hatred. This also resolves the problem of seeming anticlimactic word order. To say 'You hate and covet' is a much more natural order than to say 'You murder and covet.' Furthermore, Matthew 5:21-22 and 1 John 3:15 show that hatred is equal to murder."²

By the same principle fights and arguments follow when we do not obtain our desires.

"There are indeed few evils in human life that cannot be traced to covetousness and envy in the sense in which we find these words used in this verse. Covetousness does not always lead to possession, envy does not always attain to the position of its rivals—and the inevitable result is conflict and strife."³

¹Martin, p. 146.

²Burdick, p. 193. Cf. Motyer, pp. 140, 164-65.

³Tasker, p. 87.

"This is the condition to which lust consigns its votaries [devoted followers]; it disappoints them, and makes them mutual tormentors."¹

"Unsatisfied desire leads to murder ... disappointed ambition leads to quarrelling and fighting."²

The only way to obtain satisfaction is to ask God to give it. We do not have what God wants us to have because we do not ask Him for these things.³ This is one of the most important verses in the Bible concerning prayer. There are some things we can have from God that we will not have unless we ask Him for them (cf. Luke 11:5-13).

"Is it not true that one of the great problems of your prayer lives is simply the fact that we don't pray?"⁴

"... to know God as the master and bestower of all good things, who invites us to request them of him, and still not go to him and not ask of him—this would be of as little profit as for a man to neglect a treasure, buried and hidden in the earth, after it had been pointed out to him."⁵

4:3 However we often ask God for things to enable us to satisfy our own selfish desires ("with the wrong motives"). For example, we request more time, more money, more energy so that we can do things that we desire but that God does not desire for us. What we need to ask Him to give us is more desire for what He promises and commands (for His will). We also need less desire for what is contrary to His will for us (cf. Matt. 7:7-11).

¹Edwin T. Winkler, "Commentary on the Epistle of James," in An American Commentary on the New Testament, p. 54.

²Mayor, p. 136.

³Cf. Fanning, pp. 432-33.

⁴Cedar, p. 80.

⁵Calvin, 3:20:1.

"If prayer is no more than a formula (saying the right words, believe hard enough, confess; it will happen), then Christians are back to a type of magic: They can manipulate God or impose their will on God, for he has to answer. In contrast, New Testament prayer grows out of a trusting relationship with a father whose will is supreme."¹

"In the life of a full-time Christian minister, some may devote themselves to the activist pursuits of endless caring for the sick and house-to-house ministry to the unsaved, and skimp sermon preparation. It may be called 'getting our priorities right', but it may simply be an exercise in self-pleasing. Others lock the study door behind them. When they descend the pulpit steps on one Sunday they are already mentally climbing the same steps next Sunday. They may say that the pulpit is the best place to exercise pastoral care, and that they are putting first things first—but they may in fact just be indulging a passion."²

3. The nature of the choice 4:4-5

4:4 The real issue is: Which will I love, God or the world?

"In the simplest sense of the word, the world is each man's natural environment, that into which he enters at birth, and from which he departs in death. It is the immediate present, the seen and temporal, of which our senses bear witness, in contrast to the unseen and eternal ..."³

The world urges us to love ourselves and to put our pleasures before God's pleasures. If we agree with that kind of thinking we are unfaithful as the Lord's spiritual brides, and we become enemies of God. We have deliberately chosen to follow the world's philosophy rather than God's will. We cannot be on friendly terms with God if we follow the world's philosophy (Matt. 6:24). The world wants us to exclude God from all aspects of life. God wants us to include Him in all of life, because He is in all of life, and without Him we can do nothing (John 15:5).

¹ Davids, pp. 99-100.

² Motyer, p. 144.

³ Mayor, p. 225.

"... no man who makes worldly success his aim can be also a friend of God"¹

4:5 In this verse James gave scriptural support for what he just asserted (v. 4). However he did not quote a particular verse but instead summarized the scriptural teaching on God's jealousy (cf. Exod. 20:5; 34:14; Ps. 42:1; 84:2; Zech. 8:2) in a new statement.²

It is very difficult to translate this statement, but the best rendering seems to be something such as the following: "God jealously longs for the spirit that He made to live in us."³ Another translation is: "The Spirit which He made to dwell in us jealously yearns for the entire devotion of the heart" (cf. Rom. 8:11; 1 Cor. 3:16; Gal. 4:6; Eph. 4:30; John 7:39; 16:7).⁴

Both translations fit the preceding context well. God's people who love the world have committed spiritual adultery against Him (v. 4), yet God's Spirit jealously longs for their love (v. 5).

These translations accurately represent the Greek text. The phrase pros phthonon literally means to envy, but it is also an adverbial idiom meaning jealously.⁵ The verb epipothei means to long for or to yearn for rather than to tend toward.

"It is a most striking passage which tells of the love of the Holy Spirit, as (in one sense) distinct ¹Ibid., p. 140.

²See Sophie S. Laws, "Does Scripture Speak in Vain? A Reconsideration of James IV. 5," New Testament Studies 20 (1973-74):210-15; and Stulac, pp. 146-47.

³Cf. J. William Johnston, "James 4:5 and the Jealous Spirit," Bibliotheca Sacra 170:679 (July-September 2013):344-60.

⁴Mayor, p. 141. Cf. Oesterley, 4:459.

⁵A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature, s.v. "phthonon," p. 718. See also Ropes, p. 262.

from that of the Father or that of the Son; in connection with it should be read Rom. viii. 26-28; Eph. iv. 30; 1 Thess. v. 19."¹

Another view, which I do not think is correct, is that the human spirit in us lusts enviously.²

"Thus, in v. 4 James has accused his readers of spiritual unfaithfulness. If they are not willing to accept this indictment, he asks in v. 5 what they think about the OT passages dealing with God's jealous longing for his people. This is the significance of the introductory conjunction 'or.' Do they think Scripture speaks 'without reason' or emptily? Of course they don't think this. Consequently, it is necessary to believe that friendship with the world is enmity toward God, and thus it is spiritual unfaithfulness."³

4. The resources to choose right 4:6-10

- 4:6 God has set a high standard of wholehearted love and devotion for His people, but He gives grace that is greater than His rigorous demand. Proverbs 3:34, quoted here, reminds us that God opposes the proud: those who pursue their own pleasures. But He gives grace to the humble: those who put God's desires first in their lives. He gives grace (help) to withstand the onslaughts of the flesh within and the world without.
- 4:7 In view of God's certain supply of this grace we need to adopt a definite stance toward the people involved in this conflict. Ten aorist imperatives in verses 7-10 demand decisive action. They sound like military commands and reflect how seriously James viewed double-mindedness.⁴

¹Oesterley, 4:459.

²See Sidebottom, p. 53.

³Burdick, p. 194. Cf. Martin, p. 151.

⁴Hiebert, James, p. 236.

Toward God we must submit in humility. This means making what is of importance to Him important to us, ordering our priorities in harmony with God's priorities. It means not living to fulfill our personal ambitions but using our lives to fulfill His desires. Submission is not identical to obedience. Submission involves the surrender of the will, which allows for obedience.

We must resist Satan strongly (cf. 1 Pet. 5:9). When we do, he will flee from us. What is Satan trying to get us to do? The record of his temptations, including those of Eve and Jesus Christ, indicates that he wants to make us doubt, deny, disregard, and disobey God's Word (cf. Gen. 3; Matt. 4). We resist the devil by refusing to do these things.

"'Don't argue with the Devil,' he [Luther] said. 'He has had five thousand years of experience. He has tried out all his tricks on Adam, Abraham, and David, and he knows exactly the weak spots.'"¹

4:8 While resisting Satan on the one hand, we must also draw near to God on the other. When we do, He will come close to us. To come close to God we must go through a purification process reminiscent of what the priests in Israel underwent. We must cleanse our hands, which symbolize our outward actions, as well as purify our divided hearts, which symbolize our inner attitudes and motives. We cleanse and purify them by confession and repentance. We must remove sin from our hands, and duplicity from our hearts. Single-mindedness involves singleness of purpose, namely, living for the glory of God rather than for both God's glory and our own selfish desires (cf. 1:8).

4:9 James was calling his readers, who had compromised with the world by being double-minded, to get right with God. There is laughter and joy in the pursuit of personal desires, but we must abandon these in the process of repenting. James was not saying that Christians must be constantly miserable, mourning, weeping, and gloomy. These are only the outward signs of true repentance from a formerly divided attitude and sinful lifestyle (cf. Matt. 5:3-4).

¹Bainton, p. 284.

4:10 In concluding this section of direct advice (vv. 7-10) James sounded the same note with which he began: humble yourselves in God's presence by putting Him before self. This always results in God lifting one up both immediately and eventually. Since this is the condition in which God can best use us, He will proceed to do so for His glory (cf. Matt. 18:4; 23:12; Luke 14:11; 18:14; 1 Pet. 5:6).

"The highest honour in heaven will be the reward of the greatest humility on earth."¹

"Ralph Bell, an associate evangelist with the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association, is a godly man who tells of learning grace-reliance in a deeply personal way. Bell is a Canadian-born black man who lives and ministers in the United States. As a young man, he struggled with experiences of racial insults and discrimination. Being so treated by fellow Christians, who were disobeying James's instructions about impartiality, was especially hurtful. Bell shared his struggles with his mother, who counseled him to keep his eyes on Jesus, because Jesus would never disappoint him. As he sought to apply that advice, he began to find the grace to see others' racism as their problem. He further sought grace from God to purify his own life of hatred toward those who mistreated him. In James's terms, Ralph Bell humbled himself before the Lord, and he found himself being lifted up by the grace of God to be able to love his enemies. How does one love hostile and hurtful people? The answer is supernaturally, by relying on the grace that God gives to the humble."²

B. SELF-EXALTATION 4:11-12

Having dealt with the source of interpersonal and inner personal conflicts that believers in particular and all people generally experience, James dealt next with a different aspect of the same problem. He did so in order to motivate his readers further to forsake the philosophy of the world that puts self first. Criticizing others is dangerous, not only because it is a form of selfishness, but also because the critic exalts himself even over God when he or she criticizes.

¹Henry, p. 1936.

²Stulac, p. 151.

4:11 The speaking (Gr. katalaleo, speaking evil, maligning) in view is speaking disparagingly of, or down on, another Christian. To criticize ("speak against") another, a person must conclude that he himself is right, and the person he is criticizing is wrong. This is passing judgment, taking the role of a courtroom judge. The law in view probably refers to God's law generally, in view of the context. We sin against God's law when we criticize a brother or sister, because God has revealed that we should not pass judgment on our Christian brethren (cf. Lev. 19:15-18; Matt. 7:1). We should submit to one another (e.g., Gal. 5:13; Eph. 5:21; Phil. 2:3). Rather than taking a position of humility, such a person exalts himself to the role of judge (cf. v. 10).

"We must be careful to note the far-reaching consequences of James' teaching here: respect for law and order is necessary (as we are often told) for the health of modern society, but James goes on to remind us (v. 12) that, since God is the source of all law, what is ultimately at stake in a 'permissive society' is respect for the authority of God himself."¹

4:12 James was speaking of judging other people without divine authorization to do so, because there is only one Lawgiver and Judge. Obviously God has delegated the responsibility of judging some civil acts to human governments, some church conduct to elders, and the behavior of children to their parents. Similarly, Christians who are walking by the Spirit who observe other Christians overtaken by some fault should seek to restore them in love, not ignore them (Gal. 6:1).

Criticizing our equals is a common activity, but it is inappropriate for mere mortals. We all are responsible to God, ¹Adamson, p. 177.

ultimately and must leave the judgment of His servants up to Him (Rom. 14:1-13). We need to remember that we are on the same level with those whom we may wish to judge. We are brethren and neighbors (cf. Deut. 32:39; 1 Sam. 2:6-7; 2 Kings 5:7). James' point in this passage was that we should be extremely careful about judging other people, because God will judge us with the same severity with which we have judged one another (cf. Matt. 7:2). His point was not that we should never criticize anybody, but we should never pass judgment in the sense of condemning someone, since only the divine Judge has the authority to do that.

C. SELF-RELIANCE 4:13-17

As in the previous chapters James began this part of his epistle with the exposition of a practical problem and then moved on to its larger contextual problem, that is, its application in life. He already identified the source of interpersonal and inner personal conflicts as self-centeredness, and he explained that criticism places the critic in a seat that only God should occupy. Now he pictured a self-centered person living his or her life. He did this in order to enable his readers to see the root of this problem clearly.

"James gave an example of a boastful statement [v. 13], struck a condemnatory sentence on such boasting [v. 14], and offered a practical solution for boasting [vv. 15-17]."¹

1. The self-centered person 4:13-16

4:13 James confronted his audience like the Old Testament prophets did. He began, "Come now" (cf. Isa. 1:18; et al.). The person in James' illustration was probably a traveling Jewish merchant, "... the materialist core of the contemporary bourgeois [middle-class] prosperity."² Jewish merchants were common in the culture of James' day, and undoubtedly some of them were Christian Jews. The plans of the man in James' illustration were not wrong in themselves.

¹Blue, p. 831.

²Adamson, p. 178. See also E. M. Blaiklock, Today's Handbook of Bible Characters, p. 600.

4:14 The problem is what the merchant did not consider: his complete dependence on God (cf. Luke 12:18-20; John 15:5).

"To what extent is your life directed by the knowledge that Christ is coming back? Much of our thinking and behavior is shaped by what we can see of present circumstances or past events. Yet Scripture speaks forcefully of Christ's return as a fact that should be directing how we live now. Christians are to be motivated by the certainty of this future event."¹

4:15 The merchant should have made his planning in conscious dependence on God, recognizing His sovereign control over all of life (cf. Acts 18:21; 1 Cor. 4:19; 16:7; Phil. 2:19, 24). The Latin phrase, deo volente ("God willing," abbreviated D.V.), remains in use even today among some Christians.

"A study of the use of this conditional clause ["If the Lord wills ..."] in the NT makes it clear that we are not to repeat it mechanically in connection with every statement of future plans. Paul, for example, employs it in Acts 18:21 and 1 Corinthians 4:19, but he does not use it in Acts 19:21; Romans 15:28; or 1 Corinthians 16:5, 8. Yet it is obvious that whether Paul explicitly stated it or not, he always conditioned his plans on the will of God."²

4:16 James rebuked those of his readers who were living with this God-neglecting attitude. They derived joy from feeling that they controlled their own destiny. Here is the picture of the self-made man taking credit for what God has given him ("you boast in your arrogance"). Boasting of this kind is unrealistic. It betrays an attitude that puts man in God's place. For this reason it is evil.

¹Stulac, p. 156.

²Burdick, p. 197.

In these verses James presented four arguments that show the foolishness of ignoring God's will: the complexity of life (v. 13), the uncertainty of life (v. 14a), the brevity of life (v. 14b), and the frailty of man (v. 16).¹

2. The concluding exhortation 4:17

The person that James just pictured was guilty of a sin of omission (cf. Luke 16:19-31). It is probably not just any sin of omission that is in view here but the sin of failing to acknowledge dependence on the Lord (v. 15).² The independent person in view failed to acknowledge the place that God occupies in life as sovereign over all things (cf. John 9:41).

In concluding this discussion of conflicts James reminded his readers to put into practice what they knew. They should avoid presumption and self-confidence, and they should submit themselves humbly to God. Failure to do this is sin.

"They cannot take refuge in the plea that they have done nothing positively wrong; as Scripture makes abundantly clear, sins of omission are as real and serious as sins of commission."³

The verse that concludes each major section of James' epistle, namely, each chapter, is a proverbial statement. Each concluding verse summarizes James' point in the preceding section and states it in a pithy way that is easy to remember. However the statement in this verse (4:17) is applicable to all that James wrote in this book.

VI. MONEY AND PATIENT ENDURANCE 5:1-18

The final practical problem James addressed involves money. He wrote these instructions to warn his readers of a danger, to inform them of the consequences of the problem, and to exhort them to deal with the situation appropriately. This is his third reference to the rich and the poor (cf. 1:9-

¹Wiersbe, pp. 130-33.

²Alford, 4:2:320.

³Moo, (1985), p. 158.

11; 2:1-12). We might also consider 4:13-17, as well as 5:1-6, as dealing with the rich.¹

A. WARNINGS FOR THE RICH 5:1-6

It is characteristic of James' well-balanced style that he opened and closed his exhortations (in 2:1—5:6) with references to the rich. There is also a return in this chapter to James' encouragement to persevere in the will of God when tempted to depart from it (cf. ch. 1). Thus the book demonstrates a somewhat chiasmic structure.²

"... wealth brings consternation [v. 1], ends up in corrosion [vv. 2-3], and results in condemnation [vv. 4-6]."³

1. The introduction of the problem 5:1

Again James confronted his readers like a prophet (cf. 4:13). Rich people are usually happy that they have wealth. However James challenged his rich readers to weep and howl in anguish, but not in repentance. The reasons follow in this chapter. The Bible nowhere condemns the rich for being rich. Money is not evil (cf. 1 Tim. 6:10). Nevertheless God's Word consistently warns the rich of the temptations that financial abundance brings with it. These temptations include: a false sense of security, a desire to control others, and personal pride. The rich should not rejoice too much. Material misery could be just around the corner (cf. 1:10-11).

"The persons here addressed are not the same as those addressed in iv. 13. It is no longer the careless worldliness of the bustling trader which is condemned, but the more deadly worldliness of the unjust capitalist or landlord."⁴

¹For some helpful insights on the way Christians might speak and act when confronted with wealth, status, and power on the one hand, or poverty, ignorance, and helplessness on the other, see Duane Warden, "The Rich and Poor in James: Implications for Institutionalized Partiality," Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 43:2 (June 2000):253-57.

²A chiasmus is a rhetorical or literary figure in which words, grammatical constructions, or concepts are repeated in reverse order, in the same or a modified form.

³Blue, p. 832.

⁴Mayor, p. 153.

Probably James had in mind the rich as a class, not specifically wealthy believers or wealthy unbelievers.

2. The corrosive effect of wealth 5:2-3

5:2 The riches that rot are presumably perishable commodities such as food and drink. Garments were one of the most popular forms of wealth in the biblical world. People even used them to pay for things, and they were also heirlooms and popular presents (cf. Matt. 6:19). Even today people can spend great sums of money on clothing.

5:3 Gold and silver utensils and ornaments corrode and tarnish. Corrosion destroys the value of the metal. Christians should use money, not hoard it. Therefore the presence of corroded gold or silver in the rich man's store of possessions will bear witness to his unfaithful stewardship of his wealth. James warned that the process that destroys gold and silver is the same process that destroys the people who collect these precious metals. It is as though the corroding metal bears witness to the corroding effect that hoarding has on the hoarder himself. Hoarding wealth is a particularly serious sin for Christians, since we are living in the last days, the days immediately preceding the Lord's return (cf. Luke 12:20-21). We should be using our money to get the Lord's work done, not to enable us to live lives of selfishness and laziness (cf. Matt. 6:19-24).

"To lay up treasure in heaven means to use all that we have as stewards of God's wealth. You and I may possess many things, but we do not own them. God is the Owner of everything, and we are His stewards."¹

"The Bible does not discourage saving, or even investing; but it does condemn hoarding."²

¹Wiersbe, p. 146.

²Ibid.

Hoarding, as used here, means accumulating wealth just to have lots of it, not for security, but for prestige and self-gratification. It is difficult to know how much one should set aside for emergencies that may arise in the future (security). And it is easy to rationalize that we need to save more than we really do. Where saving stops and hoarding begins is difficult to determine. It really is a matter of the heart. How we feel about giving away what we have is a good guide to our heart attitude toward our possessions.

3. The misuse of wealth 5:4-6

5:4 Some of James' readers were evidently getting rich by cheating their hired workers out of their fair wages (cf. Deut. 24:15). Cries for justice from these oppressed people had entered God's "ears," even though their employers were deaf to them (cf. Gen. 4:5; 18:20-21).¹ The title Lord of armies (Lord Almighty; cf. Isa. 5:9; Rom. 9:29) emphasizes the sovereign omnipotence of God. Although the oppressed may appear to have no defenders on earth, they have as their helper the Lord God omnipotent in heaven.

5:5 The rich are often soft and self-indulgent (cf. Luke 16:19-31; Amos 6:1-6). This is the connotation of luxury, which is something that our culture condones but Scripture condemns. Living for pleasure implies extravagance and waste. In their greedy materialism the rich fatten themselves figuratively ("fattened your hearts"), and sometimes literally, not realizing that they are just preparing themselves for slaughter (judgment), like so many sacrificial animals.

"Like an OT prophet James denounces the wanton luxury of the rich, warning of their coming doom."²

This warning should challenge believers to avoid extravagance and self-indulgence when purchasing goods for themselves. We need to evaluate our expenditures periodically. One way to do this is to check your income tax records. How much are you giving away (deductions) compared to how much are you taking in (income)?

¹See Keith D. Campbell, "Lament in James and Its Significance for the Church," Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 60:1 (March 2017):125-38.

²Adamson, p. 87.

5:6 The oppression of the rich extends to putting to death those who stand in their way, even though these people only resist the rich righteously (i.e., not violently). As in 4:2, James may have been using "put to death" hyperbolically.¹ Many Christians have experienced persecution from people who are trying to guard or advance their own financial security (e.g., Acts 8:18-24; 19:23-28). If day laborers do not get their wages daily, they can die.

"... for day laborers it was very serious not to find work or not to be paid. For this reason James personifies the salary, seeing it as the very blood of the exploited workers crying out pitifully. The case was the same for the peasants. The peasants die because they pour out their strength in their work, but the fruit of their work does not come back to them. They cannot regain their strength because the rich withhold their salaries. Therefore James accuses the rich of condemning and killing the just (5:6)."²

These are strong words of warning. James evidently believed that his readers were erring in this area of their lives and needed a severe shock. The Jews' gift for making money, and their interest in this pursuit, needed control. We need this warning too, since modern culture values money very highly.

"There is a burden of anxiety in getting riches, there is anxiety in keeping them, there is temptation in using them, and mortal danger in abusing them. And there is a burden of account to be given at last concerning them. They are not an end of life, but a tool to living."³ ¹Hyperbole is exaggeration to make a point but not meant to be taken literally.

²Elsa Tamez, The Scandalous Message of James: Faith Without Works is Dead, p. 20.

³Blaiklock, p. 601.

As with 1:10, there is a question about whether James was referring to rich Christians or rich unbelievers in this pericope. Here, as there, I tend to think that James was probably referring to rich Christians. He seems to be addressing his readers rather than "speaking rhetorically, formally addressing non-Christians in 1:10 as well as ... in 5:1-6, but saying this really for the benefit of his Christian readers, who were suffering at the hands of rich persecutors."¹

"The World's View of Riches	The Word's View of Riches
Money is necessary for freedom.	The desire for money can be enslaving and lead to destruction. Only Christ brings true freedom (1 Tim. 6:7-10).
Money is necessary for security.	Worldly wealth is very insecure. It will quickly pass away (1:10). Real security is found in knowing and trusting God (Jer. 9:23, 24; 1 Tim. 6:17-19).
Money is what matters.	Christ and the kingdom of God are what matters (Matt. 6:33; Phil. 3:7-10).
Money is the key to having power.	Real power comes from being filled with the Spirit (Acts 1:8; 3:1-10).
Money establishes not only your net worth, but your worth as a person.	Your worth is based on what God says, not what your bank statement says (John 3:16; Eph. 1:3-14).
Money indicates that you are successful.	Success comes from knowing and doing what God says (Josh. 1:8).
Money gives you options.	God is the One who really gives you options (Eph. 3:20).

¹Stulac, p. 199. See Joseph K. Pak, "A Case for James's Condemnation of the Rich in James 5:1-6 as Addressing False Believers within the Believing Community," Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 63:4 (December 2020):721-37, for the unsaved view.

Money brings happiness.	The happiness that money brings is short-lived. And in the long run, money can actually produce 'many sorrows' (1 Tim. 6:10). Lasting joy comes from knowing God (5:1-6; John 15:11; 16:24).
Money is your reward. Save it, and spend it on yourself.	Give as much as you can (Matt. 6:19-24; Acts 20:35; 2 Cor. 9:6-11; 1 Tim. 6:18).
Money is your possession. Spend it on whatever you want.	All that you have is God's to do with as He pleases. You are merely a manager of His possessions (Ps. 24:1; Luke 19:11-27; 2 Cor. 5:10)." ¹

B. THE PROPER ATTITUDE 5:7-12

Essentially the attitude of the rich that James condemned was: Get all you can, as fast as you can, any way that you can. In the following pericope he counseled a different attitude: He urged his readers, rich and poor, to practice patience.

1. The exhortation to be patient 5:7-9

5:7 Because of the dangers that James just expounded, believers should adopt a patient attitude. The verb makrothymesate (be patient) describes "self-restraint which does not hastily retaliate a wrong."² The Lord's coming is near (v. 8; cf. Mark 13:32-37; Phil. 4:5; 1 Pet. 4:7; 1 John 2:18). In other words, because the Lord is coming soon believers should not take matters into their own hands and retaliate for offenses that they have experienced (e.g., not having been paid fairly) nor should they try to get rich at the expense of being faithful to God.

¹ The Nelson ..., p. 2104.

²J. B. Lightfoot, Saint Paul's Epistles to the Colossians and to Philemon, p. 138.

"The word parousias ('coming') was a common term used to describe the visit of a king to a city or province of his kingdom and thus depicts Christ as a royal personage."¹

The early rains came shortly after planting in the land of Israel in late October and early November. The late rains followed, as the crop was maturing, in late March and early April. This reference may imply a Palestinian origin for the epistle. James knew agriculture in Palestine. The point of James' illustration of the farmer seems to be that as Christians we are primarily sowing and cultivating in this life, not mainly reaping rewards.

"The picture is that of the small farmer in Palestine ... The small farmer plants his carefully saved seed and hopes for a harvest, living on short rations and suffering hunger during the last weeks. The whole livelihood, indeed the life itself, of the family depends on a good harvest: the loss of the farm, semistarvation, or death could result from a bad year. So the farmer waits for an expected future event (ekdechetai); no one but he could know how precious the grain really is ..."²

5:8 When the Lord returns we will receive our reward at the judgment seat of Christ. In the meantime we should be patient and encouraged, knowing that our reward lies ahead, as God has promised (cf. Matt. 6:20). The rich who behave like typical rich people either do not have or have lost sight of this hope. They live only to accumulate as much here and now as they can.

"... the finish line is just ahead: the important point is not to give up now and lose all that for which one has already suffered."³

¹Burdick, p. 201.

²Dauids, The Epistle ..., p. 183.

³Ibid., p. 184.

"Anything that must happen, and could happen today, is in a very legitimate sense at hand."¹

5:9 It is easy for us to blame ("complain ... against") one another for our present discomforts.

"What is forbidden is not the loud and bitter denunciation of others but the unexpressed feeling of bitterness or the smothered resentment that may express itself in a groan or a sigh."²

James forbade this because it involves improper judging (cf. 4:11-12). The judgment of believers will take place soon. This verse is a clear indication that the early Christians expected the Lord Jesus to return imminently (i.e., at any moment).³ If (Since) Jesus could return at any moment it follows that He will return before the seven-year Tribulation, which Scripture says must precede His Second Coming to establish His kingdom on the earth. Thus the Rapture must be distinct from the Second Coming, separated by at least seven years.

"The early Christians' conviction that the parousia was 'near', or 'imminent', meant that they fully believed that it could transpire within a very short period of time—not that it had to."⁴

"In light of the concept of the imminent coming of Christ and the fact that the New Testament does teach His imminent coming, we can conclude that ¹Hodges, The Epistle ..., p. 111.

²Burdick, p. 202.

³See Gerald B. Stanton, Kept from the Hour, ch. 6: "The Imminency of the Coming of Christ for the Church," pp. 108-37.

⁴Moo, (1985), p. 169. See Robert G. Bratcher, A Translator's Guide to the Letters from James, Peter, and Jude, p. 55; M. F. Sadler, The General Epistles of SS. James, Peter, John and Jude, pp. 68-69; Adamson, pp. 191-92; Frank E. Gaebelin, The Practical Epistle of James, p. 112; Vernon D. Doerksen, James, p. 123; E. C. Blackman, The Epistle of James, p. 146; J. Alec Motyer, The Tests of Faith, p. 107; Mitton, p. 186; Spiros Zodhiates, The Patience of Hope, p. 90; David P. Scaer, James the Apostle of Faith, p. 126; Homer A. Kent Jr., Faith that Works, p. 176; Harold T. Bryson, How Faith Works, pp. 116-17, 119; Davids, p. 185; and Simon J. Kistemaker, Exposition of the Epistle of James and the Epistles of John, p. 165.

the Pretribulation Rapture view is the only view of the Rapture of the church that comfortably fits the New Testament teaching of the imminent coming of Christ. It is the only view that can honestly say that Christ could return at any moment, because it alone teaches that Christ will come to rapture the church before the 70th week of Daniel 9 or the Tribulation period begins and that nothing else must happen before His return."¹

James pictured Jesus (the Judge) standing right at the door of heaven ready to welcome Christians into His heavenly throne room. The hope of His imminent (any moment) return should strongly motivate us to live patiently and sacrificially now.

2. Examples of endurance 5:10-11

5:10 One could use just about any one of the Hebrew prophets as an example of patient endurance in suffering (cf. 1:4).

5:11 Job was not always patient, but he did determine to endure whatever might befall him as he waited for God to clear up the mystery of his suffering (cf. Job 13:10, 15; 16:19-21; 19:25).

"Though he showed much of impatience, yet he always returned to this, that he committed himself wholly to God, and at last showed a perfect spirit of enduring submission."²

In verses 7-10 James pleaded for patience (makrothymia) that restrains itself and does not retaliate. Here he advocated perseverance (hypomone) through difficult circumstances (cf. 1:3; Heb. 11:25).

¹Renald E. Showers, Maranatha: Our Lord, Come! A Definitive Study of the Rapture of the Church, p. 149.

²Jamieson, et al., p. 1459.

Job reaped a great reward at the end of his trial. We see God's compassion and mercy especially at the end of Job's experience, though God demonstrated these characteristics earlier as well. Job determined to continue to live by faith even when he experienced the temptation to depart from the will of God (cf. 1:2-4). (This is the only reference to Job in the New Testament.)

"James has been concerned to help believers to overcome the tendency to react like the world to the injustices heaped on them by the world. The world, by its very nature antagonistic to God and His kingdom, will continue to oppose God's people. But if these truths grip the hearts of His people, it will enable them to overcome the spirit of worldliness by refraining from a worldly reaction to the world's injustices."¹

3. The evidence of patience 5:12

Swearing is an evidence of impatience.

"What he [James] means is that of all the manifestations of impatience in times of stress and affliction the most frequent is the taking of the Lord's name in vain by the use of explosive utterances and hasty and irreverent oaths."²

When we become impatient and lose self-control we tend to say things better left unspoken. These include swearing, abusing the Lord's name, and appealing to heaven, earth, or whatever, as confirmation that we are speaking the truth (cf. Matt. 5:33-37).

"It should be obvious that what is referred to in Matthew and James is the light, casual use of oaths in informal conversation—not formal oaths in such places as courts of law [cf. Ps. 110:4; 2 Cor. 1:23; Gal. 1:20]."³

"The Jews were wont [accustomed] to spit hairs in their use of profanity, and by avoiding God's name imagine that they were not really guilty of this sin, just as professing Christians today use 'pious oaths' which violate the prohibition of Jesus."¹

¹Hiebert, James, p. 278.

²Tasker, p. 124. Cf. Mayor, p. 167.

³Burdick, p. 203.

What is not in view in this discussion is the use of "dirty" speech.

"James's wisdom amounts to this: we should never need to use an oath to prove that 'this time I really mean it!' Instead we should always 'really mean it.'"²

"Our mere word should be as utterly trustworthy as a signed document, legally correct and complete."³

The root problem with the improper behavior that often characterizes the rich, as James saw it, is an attitude of impatience that results from rejecting or forgetting divine revelation concerning the future. Knowledge of the future, as God has revealed it in Scripture, has very direct application to everyday living. It should affect the way we think about money, among other things.

C. THE PROPER ACTION 5:13-18

James encouraged his readers to pray, as well as to be patient, in order to enable them to overcome the temptation to live only for the present and to stop living by faith. James not only begins and ends his epistle with references to trials, but he "also begins (1:5-8) and ends (5:13-18) with prayer as the instrumental means for managing trials."⁴

1. The way of release 5:13

Prayer to God, not profanity, is the proper outlet for feelings of sadness caused by suffering as we patiently endure.

"James's emphasis on prayer in this section is especially noteworthy since few things undergird perseverance more ¹Robertson, 6:63.

²Hodges, The Epistle ..., p. 115. Cf. Lev. 19:12; Num. 30:3-4; Hos. 4:2; Jer. 5:2; Zech. 5:3-4; Mal. 3:5.

³Mitton, p. 193.

⁴C. Richard Wells, "The Theology of Prayer in James," Criswell Theological Review 1:1 (Fall 1986):86.

effectively than prayer. In the final analysis, a persevering life is also a prayerful life."¹

The right way to express joy is by praising God ("sing praises"), not by swearing.

2. The prescription for help 5:14-16

It is not surprising to find that James dealt with sickness (Gr. asthenai, weakness) in this epistle. He referred to the fact that departure from the will of God sets the Christian on a course that, unless corrected, may result in his or her premature physical death (1:15, 21; 5:20). Spiritual weakness, and sometimes physical sickness, results from sinful living.² James gave instructions about how to deal with these maladies in verses 14-20.

5:14 Times of spiritual weakness and/or physical sickness are usually occasions in which it is especially difficult to be patient (e.g., Job).

"Anointing ... with oil" was the equivalent in James' day of applying medication (cf. 1 Tim. 5:23).

"... oil among the ancients was highly valued for its therapeutic qualities (Isa. 1:16; Luke 10:34)."³

The oil, which was normally olive oil, provided more refreshment and soothing comfort than it did real relief for serious ailments, but people drank it as well as rubbing it on themselves as a medication. The term translated "anointing him with oil" in Greek refers to medicinal anointing, not religious ceremonial anointing.⁴ James used aleiphein (rub) here rather than chriein (anoint). The former word is the "mundane and profane" term—referring to all kinds of rubbing, ¹Hodges, The Epistle ..., p. 113.

²See Kurt E. Koch, Between Christ and Satan, pp. 183-99.

³Merrill F. Unger, "Divine Healing," Bibliotheca Sacra 128:511 (July-September 1971):236. Cf. Adamson, p. 197. See also Mayor, pp. 170-71, for extrabiblical references.

⁴Robertson, 6:64-65.

whereas the latter is the "sacred and religious" word used to describe religious ceremonies.¹

James instructed that in times of weakness, spiritual or physical, Christians should call for their church elders to visit them, to pray for them, and to minister to them, anointing them in Jesus' name (i.e., as His servants).²

"James specifically exhorts the sick to call for the elders, not deacons, friends, or miracle workers. He assumes that all congregations, as in Jerusalem, have an official, recognized body of elders to call on for help."³

It is remarkable how many Christians today, who go into the hospital, fail to send out a request to the elders of their church to come and pray for them. It is more common for them to simply send out a general request for prayer to their friends and/or fellow church members.

"Prayer is the more significant of the two ministries performed by the elders. 'Pray' is the main verb, while 'anoint' is a participle. Moreover, the overall emphasis of the paragraph is on prayer. So the anointing is a secondary action."⁴

The fact that the ailing or weary person was to call for the elders gives a clue that this person's sickness somehow connects with some spiritual condition. This proves to be the case in verse 15. Today a skilled physician normally provides the medical attention. The elders need to deal with the spiritual factors affecting the sick person, if any, since they have a responsibility for the spiritual welfare of the flock (Heb. 13:17).

¹R. C. Trench, Synonyms of the New Testament, p. 129. See also Burdick, p. 204; and McGee, 5:669-70.

²See John Wilkinson, "Healing in the Epistle of James," Scottish Journal of Theology 24 (1971):338-40.

³Alexander Strauch, Biblical Eldership, p. 284. See pp. 284-91.

⁴Burdick, p. 204. See also Frank E. Gaebelein, Faith that Lives, p. 120.

Some Christians believe that anointing with oil was a Jewish custom and therefore it was not meant to be perpetuated in the church.¹ However it was not just a Jewish practice, and so it seems optional for today.

In this context James had in view a sickness with spiritual roots. Actually all sickness is traceable to the Fall, though not all sickness can be traceable to some specific sin (cf. John 9:3).

"When our oldest son, Daniel, was a little boy, he contracted a very serious illness. He was rushed to the Denver Children's Hospital where he was under the care of an outstanding pediatrician who was a committed Christian. As my wife, Jean, and I stood with the doctor next to Dan's bed which was covered by an oxygen tent, the doctor shared some counsel with us which I shall never forget. He said, 'I have done everything I can do. Dan has the best that medicine can offer. Now we must entrust him to God.' He then continued, 'I have found the best combination for healing is a healthy blend of penicillin and prayer.'"²

It is interesting that James did not tell his readers to call for someone with the gift of healing. Evidently such people were rare even in the very early history of the church when James evidently wrote.

Probably this treatment reminded the sick person of the power of the Holy Spirit, which anointing with oil symbolized in the Old Testament.³

"Aleiphein [rub] ... may have been chosen over chriein [anoint] because of standard usage yet

¹E.g., A. C. Gaebelien, 4:2:40.

²Cedar, p. 100. Paragraph division omitted.

³Fanning, p. 433. Cf. Gary S. Shogren, "Will God Heal Us—A Re-examination of James 5:14-16a," Evangelical Quarterly 61 (1989):99-108.

still with the intention of conveying the thought that the anointing of oil was symbolic."¹

This verse, along with Mark 6:13, is the basis for the Roman Catholic doctrine of extreme unction (i.e., anointing someone with oil at death in order to gain merit with God for so doing.² This practice began in the eighth century.³

5:15 "Difficulties in deciding what exactly in the preceding verse is meant by anointing should not cause us to overlook the main point of vv 13-18, which is prayer. It is prayer—not the anointing—which leads to the healing of the sick person."⁴

The elders' prayers offered in faith will restore (lit. save, Gr. sosei, make well; cf. Matt. 9:21-22; Mark 6:56) the sick person and revitalize (Gr. egerei, raise up) him or her. "Offered in faith" means: presented with confidence in God's power to heal if that is His will in this case (cf. Matt. 8:1-13; Mark 5:35-42). By the same token, "the Lord will raise him" to health if this is His will (John 14:13; 1 John 5:14).⁵

"The medicine does not heal the sick, but it helps nature (God) do it. The doctor cooperates with God in nature."⁶

Benjamin Franklin reportedly said, "God heals, and the doctor collects the fee."

There is no basis in Scripture for the popular idea that praying in faith means praying with confidence that something will happen just because we pray (cf. 1:5-6; 2 Cor. 12:7-10). Faith always must have the Person or promise of God as its object in order to be effective.

¹Martin, p. 209.

²Kenneth Scott Latourette, A History of Christianity, pp. 532-33. For refutation of this view, see Calvin, 4:19:18-21; and Adamson, pp. 204-5.

³Blue, p. 834. See Ludwig Ott, Fundamentals of Catholic Dogma, pp. 445-50.

⁴Martin, p. 209.

⁵See Anderson, p. 278.

⁶Robertson, 6:65.

"It is a prayer of faith, i.e. the prayer which expresses trust in God and flows out of commitment to him, for only such prayers are effective ..."¹

Neither does James' statement mean that God will raise the sick person up by resurrection after he or she dies. Nowhere in Scripture is resurrection conditioned on prayer. It is something that God will do to every person without reference to prayer.

Some take the faith in view here as a special God-given assurance that it is His will to heal in this instance (cf. 1 Cor. 12:9).² However simple faith in God seems to be in view, since James did not qualify it.

If the sufferer has committed some sin or sins that caused his or her debilitated condition, James added, God will forgive those sins. This happens when the sinner confesses the sin or sins to God (1 John 1:9; cf. Matt. 6:12). Not all sickness is the direct result of some sin (cf. John 9:1-3).

"James's point is simply that both must be dealt with when they are linked."³

5:16 In view of the possibility of spiritual and physical sickness following sin, believers should confess their sins against one another to one another.⁴ The implication is that this confession is to be in private. Furthermore they should pray for one another so that God may heal them (both spiritually and physically).

"Much is assumed here that is not expressed."⁵

¹ Davids, The Epistle ..., p. 194. See also Thomas L. Constable, "The Doctrine of Prayer" (Th.D. dissertation, Dallas Theological Seminary, 1969), p. 111; and Mayor, p. 173.

² E.g., D. Edmond Hiebert, The Epistle of James: Tests of a Living Faith, p. 322; idem, James, p. 297; Guy H. King, A Belief That Behaves: An Expository Study of the Epistle of James, p. 124; and Motyer, The Message ..., p. 198.

³ Fanning, p. 434.

⁴ See Augsburg, pp. 64-72.

⁵ Robertson, 6:65.

James made these assumptions consistent with other revelation concerning prayer that the writers of Scripture give elsewhere.¹

"In the ancient mind sin and sickness went together, and so confession of sin was necessary if prayer for the sick was to be effective. The confession is to be not only to the elders (or other ministers) but to one another, that is, probably to those they have wronged."²

Husbands and wives need to create an atmosphere in the home that promotes transparency and makes confessing our sins to our spouses easier (cf. Col. 3:12-13). We need to demonstrate total acceptance of our mate (cf. 1 John 4:18). We also need to show an attitude of constant forgiveness (Eph. 4:31-32). Spouses should make a commitment to verbalize their emotions without pulling back or quitting. This involves acknowledging our emotions, explaining and describing our feelings, and sharing our feelings regardless of our mate's response.

Here are some suggestions for improving your ability to express your emotions: Practice sharing your emotions with your mate. Find a model of transparency and study him or her. Read the psalms to see how the psalmists expressed their emotions. Memorize selected proverbs that deal with specific areas in which you have difficulty. Focus on communication as a special subject of study. Share laughter together.³

"We must never confess sin beyond the circle of that sin's influence. Private sin requires private confession; public sin requires public confession. It is wrong for Christians to 'hang dirty wash in ¹See Thomas L. Constable, Talking to God: What the Bible Teaches about Prayer, pp. 129-30.

²Adamson, p. 189.

³*Family Life Conference*, pp. 78-79.

public,' for such 'confessing' might do more harm than the original sin."¹

"Perhaps ... the 'sins' that need to be confessed and remitted are those lapses from faithful endurance that James has written to warn about throughout the course of this hortatory [aiming to exhort] tract."²

"Does all this mean that confession to a brother is a divine law? No, confession is not a law, it is an offer of divine help for the sinner. It is possible that a person may by God's grace break through to certainty, new life, the Cross, and fellowship without benefit of confession to a brother. It is possible that a person may never know what it is to doubt his own forgiveness and despair of his own confession of sin, that he may be given everything in his own private confession to God. We have spoken here for those who cannot make this assertion. Luther himself was one of those for whom the Christian life was unthinkable without mutual, brotherly confession. In the Large Catechism he said: 'Therefore when I admonish you to confession I am admonishing you to be a Christian'. Those who, despite all their seeking and trying, cannot find the great joy of fellowship, the Cross, the new life, and certainty should be shown the blessing that God offers us in mutual confession. Confession is within the liberty of the Christian. Who can refuse, without suffering loss, a help that God has deemed it necessary to offer?"³

"The practice of auricular confession was not made generally obligatory even by the Church of Rome till the Lateran Council of 1215 under ¹Wiersbe, p. 170. See also John R. W. Stott, Confess your Sins, p. 12.

²Martin, p. 215.

³Dietrich Bonhoeffer, Life Together, p. 92.

Innocent III., which ordered that every adult person should confess to the priest at least once in the year. In all other Churches it is still optional."¹

A righteous man's prayers can accomplish much in the spiritual and physical deliverance of someone else, as Elijah's praying illustrates (vv. 17-18). In this verse the righteous man is the person who has confessed his sins and has received forgiveness.

"Prayer is powerful for only one reason. It is the means whereby we avail ourselves of the power of God."²

Evidently James practiced what he preached about prayer. Eusebius, the early church historian, quoted Hegesippus, an earlier commentator, who gave, Eusebius claimed, an accurate account of James:

"He was in the habit of entering the temple alone, and was often found upon his bended knees, and interceding for the forgiveness of the people; so that his knees became as hard as [a] camel's, in consequence of his habitual supplication and kneeling before God."³

"The truth of James 5:13-16 is applicable for believers today. James was not discussing sickness in general, nor necessarily severe illness that doctors cannot heal. Rather he was speaking of sickness that is the result of unrighteous behavior. James did not write to give a definitive statement on the healing of all sickness for Christians. The passage sheds light on God's dealing with those in the early church whose actions were not pleasing to him. This text speaks about individuals who sin against the Lord and, in light of the context for the book, especially those who sin with their tongues. If church members today took this passage seriously, it would bring about significant results, just as did Elijah's prayer. When Christians recognize sinful attitudes and wrongful behavior and turn to ¹Mayor, p. 176. See also Alford, 4:2:328; Ott, pp. 432-33.

²C. Samuel Storms, Reaching God's Ear, p. 214.

³Eusebius, 2:23:76. See also Baxter, 6:285.

the Lord, the result is forgiveness and restoration and, in specific cases in which sickness is the result of a particular sin, there can be physical healing."¹

"There is no such thing as (so to speak) 'non-spiritual' healing. When the aspirin works, it is the Lord who has made it work; when the surgeon sets the broken limb and the bone knits, it is the Lord who has made it knit. Every good gift is from above! ... On no occasion should a Christian approach the doctor without also approaching God ..."²

3. The power of prayer 5:17-18

James referred to Elijah's experience in order to illustrate the power of prayer (1 Kings 17:1; 18:1, 41-45). In view of the remarkable answers that Elijah received, James reminded his audience that Elijah was an ordinary man ("with a nature like ours").

"Here the point is not that Elijah put up a particularly fervent prayer but that praying was precisely what he did."³

"Prayed earnestly" is literally prayed with prayer. This verse is not a call for fervent prayer so much as a call for prayer period (cf. 4:16). Alford interpreted this phrase: "made it a special matter of prayer."⁴ A righteous person who prays can accomplish much. Therefore answers to prayer are within the reach of any believer (cf. Luke 11:9-13). However, as mentioned previously, James used the word righteousness like Jesus did: to refer to right conduct.

Elijah influenced God in the outworking of His decree by means of his praying.⁵ God allows us to influence Him in how He controls some events through prayer even today, as well as in certain areas of His will. One of ¹Wendell G. Johnston, "Does James Give Believers a Pattern for Dealing with Sickness and Healing?" in Integrity of Heart, Skillfulness of Hands, p. 174.

²Motyer, The Message ..., p. 193.

³Adamson, p. 201.

⁴Alford, 4:2:329.

⁵See Thomas L. Constable, "What Prayer Will and Will Not Change," in Essays in Honor of J. Dwight Pentecost, pp. 105-111.

these areas is how He deals with Christians who have departed from His will.

"... Elijah confidently made his audacious petitions to Jehovah because he was conscious that they were in harmony with the will of God. He could confidently persist in his request for rain (1 Ki 18:42-44) because he knew that God had promised to send the rain he was asking for (1 Ki 18:2 [sic 1]). He could persevere in prayer because he knew his petition was in harmony with the expressed purpose of God."¹

"Knowing the will of God is the sure foundation for effective prayer [1 John 5:14]."²

"When the Scriptural teaching that prayer is a definite means of working with God is apprehended, we feel that this is fully in keeping with His gracious character. God yearns to take His sons into His confidence and let them share with Him in the accomplishment of His purposes. He has so arranged this world that there is a definite place for answered prayer in the divine government. He deliberately so constituted things that His believing children may have, and are invited to have, a definite share in the fulfillment of His saving purpose with mankind through intercessory prayer. The Scriptures are replete with illustrations of how the cause of the Lord was furthered as God answered the prayers of His people."³

"So the example of Elijah is used as a counterpoint to stress once again the need for a peaceful solution gained by prayer and submission to the divine will."⁴

In an interesting article one writer argued that James 5:13-18 does not refer to physical healing generally but specifically to discouragement and depression.⁵ Whereas the Greek words for sick (vv. 14, 15) and healed (v. 16) allow this interpretation, I believe that we should prefer their normal

¹D. Edmond Hiebert, Working With God: Scriptural Studies in Intercession, p. 12.

²*Ibid.*, p. 13.

³*Ibid.*

⁴Martin, p. 213.

⁵Daniel R. Hayden, "Calling the Elders to Pray," Bibliotheca Sacra 138:551 (July-September 1981):258-66. See Wells, pp. 105-6, for a modified version of this view.

meaning here, primarily because of the context. There is nothing in the context that would limit the healing to psychological conditions. I believe that James used the case of a sick person in order to demonstrate the powerful effect that praying can have to encourage his readers to pray for those who are sick because of sin. He also did so to encourage them to exercise patience rather than living for the present.

VII. THE WAY BACK TO LIVING BY FAITH 5:19-20

James concluded this major section, and his entire epistle, by explaining how a brother or sister who had erred could return to fellowship with God and could resume living by faith. These instructions apply directly to what James just explained in chapter 5. However they also show the way back to any who may have stumbled in the other errors that James dealt with in this book.

5:19 This verse also ties in with what James had just said about the privilege and duty of prayer. Any believer, not just the elders, can help a brother back into the right way (v. 14; cf. Ezek. 33:1-9; Gal. 6:1).

"It was easy then, and is now, to be led astray from Christ, who is the Truth."¹

5:20 The soul saved from death is that of the backslider to whom also belongs the multitude of sins. We should probably understand the soul to represent the whole person here, as well as elsewhere in James' epistle (cf. 1:21).² Death here describes the temporal destruction of the person, not his or her eternal damnation (cf. 1 Cor. 3:15; 1 John 5:16). The repentance of the reclaimed sinning believer covers or results in the forgiveness (covering) of his or her sins. This description of forgiveness harks back to Old Testament usage, where the biblical writers described sin as covered when forgiven. Such usage was understandable for James, who was a Jewish ¹Robertson, 6:67.

²See Bob Wilkin, "Soul Talk, Soul Food, and 'Soul Salvation,'" Grace Evangelical Society News 6:12 (December 1991):2; and idem, "'Soul Salvation,' Part 2; Saving the Soul of a Fellow Christian; James 5:19-20," Grace Evangelical Society News 7:1 (January 1992):2.

believer writing to other Jewish believers primarily (1:1; cf. Matt. 7:1-5; Gal. 6:1-5). His description does not contradict other New Testament revelation concerning forgiveness.

This epistle deals with five practical problems that every believer, immature or mature, encounters as he or she seeks to live by faith, plus the issues underlying these problems. Like a skillful physician James not only identified the problems but he uncovered their sources, pointed out complicating factors, and prescribed treatment to overcome them with a view to his readers' becoming more spiritually mature. The problems themselves, as well as James' method of dealing with them, account for the popularity of this epistle throughout church history, and for its perennial value in ministry.

Bibliography

- Adamson, James B. The Epistle of James. New International Commentary on the New Testament series. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1976; reprint ed. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1984.
- Alford, Henry. The Greek Testament. 4 vols. New ed. Cambridge: Deighton, Bell, and Co., 1883, 1881, 1880, 1884.
- Allman, James E. "Suffering in the Non-Pauline Epistles." In Why, O God? Suffering and Disability in the Bible and the Church, pp. 195-205. Edited by Larry J. Waters and Roy B. Zuck. Wheaton: Crossway, 2011.
- Anderson, Don. James: Running Uphill into the Wind. Neptune, N.J.: Loizeaux Brothers, 1990.
- Augsburger, David W. Seventy Times Seven: The Freedom of Forgiveness. Chicago: Moody Press, 1970.
- Bailey, Mark L., and Thomas L. Constable. The New Testament Explorer. Nashville: Word Publishing Co., 1999. Reissued as Nelson's New Testament Survey. Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1999.
- Bainton, Roland H. Here I Stand: A Life of Martin Luther. Nashville: Abingdon Press, 1950. Reprint ed., New York: Mentor Books, 1955.
- Barclay, William. The Letters of James and Peter. The Daily Study Bible series. 2nd ed. Edinburgh: Saint Andrew Press, 1964.
- _____. New Testament Words. London: SCM, 1964.
- Baxter, J. Sidlow. Explore the Book. 1960. One vol. ed. Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House, 1980.
- Bell, M. Charles. Calvin and Scottish Theology: The Doctrine of Assurance. Edinburgh: Handsel Press, 1985.
- Bing, Charles C. Simply by Grace: An Introduction to God's Life-Changing Gift. Grand Rapids: Kregel Publications, 2009.

- Bjork, William G. "A Critique of Zane Hodges' The Gospel Under Siege: A Review Article." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 30:4 (December 1987):457-67.
- Blackman, E. C. The Epistle of James. Naperville, Ill.: Allenson, 1957.
- Blaiklock, E. M. Today's Handbook of Bible Characters. Minneapolis: Bethany House Publishers, 1979.
- Blue, J. Ronald. "James." In The Bible Knowledge Commentary: New Testament. Edited by John F. Walvoord and Roy B. Zuck. Wheaton: Scripture Press Publications, Victor Books, 1983.
- Bonhoeffer, Dietrich. Life Together. Translated by J. W. Doberstein. New York: Harper, 1954.
- Bratcher, Robert G. A Translator's Guide to the Letters from James, Peter, and Jude. New York: United Bible Societies, 1984.
- Brooks, Keith L. James—Belief in Action. Teach Yourself the Bible series. Chicago: Moody Bible Institute, 1962.
- Bryson, Harold T. How Faith Works. Nashville: Broadman Press, 1985.
- Burdick, Donald W. "James." In Hebrews-Revelation. Vol. 12 of The Expositor's Bible Commentary. 12 vols. Edited by Frank E. Gaebelein and J. D. Douglas. Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House, 1981.
- Calvin, John. Institutes of the Christian Religion. The Library of Christian Classics series, volumes 20 and 21. Edited by John T. McNeill. Translated by Ford Lewis Battles. Philadelphia: Westminster Press, 1960.
- Campbell, Keith D. "Lament in James and Its Significance for the Church." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 60:1 (March 2017):125-38.
- Carson, Donald A., and Douglas J. Moo. An Introduction to the New Testament. 2nd ed. Grand Rapids: Zondervan, 2005.
- Cedar, Paul A. James, 1, 2 Peter, Jude. The Communicator's Commentary series. Waco: Word Books, 1984.

Chitwood, Arlen L. Judgment Seat of Christ. Norman, Okla.: The Lamp Broadcast, Inc., 1986.

_____. Salvation of the Soul. Norman, Okla.: The Lamp Broadcast, Inc., 1983.

Coder, J. Maxwell. Faith That Works. Moody Manna series. Chicago: Moody Bible Institute, 1966.

Constable, Thomas L. "The Doctrine of Prayer." Th.D. Dissertation, Dallas Theological Seminary, 1969.

_____. Talking to God: What the Bible Teaches about Prayer. Grand Rapids: Baker Book House, 1995; reprint ed., Eugene, Oreg.: Wipf & Stock Publishers, 2005.

_____. "What Prayer Will and Will Not Change." In Essays in Honor of J. Dwight Pentecost, pp. 99-113. Edited by Stanley D. Toussaint and Charles H. Dyer. Chicago: Moody Press, 1986.

Darby, John Nelson. Synopsis of the Books of the Bible. Revised ed. 5 vols. New York: Loizeaux Brothers Publishers, 1942.

Dauids, Peter H. The Epistle of James. New International Greek Testament Commentary series. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1982.

_____. James. New International Bible Commentary series. Peabody, Mass.: Hendriksen, 1989.

DeGraaf, David. "Some Doubts about Doubt: The New Testament Use of Diakrino." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 48:8 (December 2005):733-55.

Dibelius, Martin. James. Revised by Heinrich Greeven. Translated by Michael A. Williams. Edited by Helmut Koester. English ed., Philadelphia: Fortress Press, 1976.

Dillow, Joseph C. The Reign of the Servant Kings. Miami Springs, Fla.: Schoettle Publishing Co., 1992.

Doerksen, Vernon D. James. Chicago: Moody Press, 1983.

Ehrman, Bart D. A Brief Introduction to the New Testament. New York and Oxford, U.K.: Oxford University Press, 2004.

_____. The New Testament: A Historical Introduction to the Early Christian Writings. 3rd ed. New York and Oxford, U.K.: Oxford University Press, 2000, 2004.

Eusebius. The Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius Pamphilus. Twin Brooks series. Popular ed. Grand Rapids: Baker Book House, 1974.

Family Life Conference. Little Rock, Ark.: Family Ministry, 1990.

Fanning, Buist M. "A Theology of James." In A Biblical Theology of the New Testament, pp. 417-35. Edited by Roy B. Zuck. Chicago: Moody Press, 1994.

Fiorello, Michael D. "The Ethical Implication of Holiness in James 2." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 55:3 (September 2012):557-72.

Gaebelein, Arno C. The Annotated Bible. 4 vols. Reprint ed. Chicago: Moody Press, and New York: Loizeaux Brothers, 1970.

Gaebelein, Frank E. Faith That Lives. Doniger and Raughley, 1955; reprint ed. Chicago: Moody Press, 1969.

_____. The Practical Epistle of James. Great Neck, N.Y.: Doniger & Raughley, Inc., 1955.

A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament. By C. G. Wilke. Revised by C. L. Wilibald Grimm. Translated, revised and enlarged by Joseph Henry Thayer, 1889.

A Greek-English Lexicon of the New Testament and Other Early Christian Literature. By Walter Bauer. Translated by William F. Arndt and Wilbur Gingrich, 4th rev. ed.

Guthrie, Donald. New Testament Introduction: Hebrews to Revelation. 2nd ed. reprinted. London: Tyndale Press, 1962, 1966.

Hamilton, Victor P. The Book of Genesis: Chapters 1—17. New International Commentary on the Old Testament series. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1990.

Hanna, Kenneth G. From Gospels to Glory: Exploring the New Testament. Bloomington, Ind.: CrossBooks, 2014.

Hayden, Daniel R. "Calling the Elders to Pray." Bibliotheca Sacra 138:551 (July-September 1981):258-66.

Henry, Matthew. Commentary on the Whole Bible. One volume ed. Edited by Leslie F. Church. Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing Co., 1961.

Hiebert, D. Edmond. The Epistle of James: Tests of a Living Faith. Chicago: Moody Press, 1979.

_____. James. Chicago: Moody Press, 1992.

_____. "The Unifying Theme of the Epistle of James." Bibliotheca Sacra 135:539 (July-September 1978):221-31.

_____. Working With God: Scriptural Studies in Intercession. New York: Carlton Press, 1987.

Hodges, Zane C. Dead Faith: What Is It? Dallas, Redencion Viva, 1987.

_____. "The Epistle of James." In The Grace New Testament Commentary, 2:1099-1142. Edited by Robert N. Wilkin. 2 vols. Denton, Tex.: Grace Evangelical Society, 2010.

_____. The Gospel Under Siege. Dallas: Redencion Viva, 1981.

_____. The Hungry Inherit: Refreshing Insights on Salvation, Discipleship, and Rewards. Chicago: Moody Press, 1972.

_____. The Epistle of James: Proven Character through Testing. Grace New Testament Commentary series. Irving, Tex.: Grace Evangelical Society, 1994.

_____. "Light on James Two from Textual Criticism." Bibliotheca Sacra 120:480 (October-December 1963):341-50.

The Holy Bible: Authorized King James Version. Cambridge, U.K.: Cambridge University Press, n.d.

The Holy Bible: New International Version. Colorado Springs, et al.: International Bible Society, 1984.

- Ice, Thomas D. "Dispensational Hermeneutics." In Issues in Dispensationalism, pp. 29-49. Edited by Wesley R. Willis and John R. Master. Chicago: Moody Press, 1994.
- Jamieson, Robert; A. R. Fausset; and David Brown. Commentary Practical and Explanatory on the Whole Bible. Reprint ed. Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House, 1961.
- Jenkins, C. Ryan. "Faith and Works in Paul and James." Bibliotheca Sacra 159:633 (January-March 2002):62-78.
- Johnson, John E. "The Old Testament Offices as Paradigm for Pastoral Identity." Bibliotheca Sacra 152:606 (April-June 1995):182-200.
- Johnston, J. William. "James 4:5 and the Jealous Spirit." Bibliotheca Sacra 170:679 (July-September 2013):344-60.
- Johnston, Wendell G. "Does James Give Believers a Pattern for Dealing with Sickness and Healing?" In Integrity of Heart, Skillfulness of Hands, pp. 168-74. Edited by Charles H. Dyer and Roy B. Zuck. Grand Rapids: Baker Book House, 1994.
- Josephus, Flavius. The Works of Flavius Josephus. Translated by William Whiston. London: T. Nelson and Sons, 1866; reprint ed. Peabody, Mass.: Hendrickson Publishers, 1988.
- Kendall, R. T. Calvin and English Calvinism to 1649. Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1979.
- _____. Once Saved, Always Saved. Chicago: Moody Press, 1983.
- Kent, Homer A., Jr. Faith that Works. Grand Rapids: Baker Book House, 1986.
- Kidner, Derek. Psalms 1—72. Tyndale Old Testament Commentaries series. Leicester, England, and Downers Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity Press, 1973.
- King, Guy H. A Belief That Behaves: An Expository Study of the Epistle of James. 1941. Reprint ed. London: Marshall, Morgan & Scott, 1945.
- Kirk, J. A. "The Meaning of Wisdom in James: Examination of a Hypothesis." New Testament Studies 16 (1969):24-38.

Kistemaker, Simon J. Exposition of the Epistle of James and the Epistles of John. Grand Rapids: Baker Book House, 1986.

_____. "The Theological Message of James." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 29:1 (March 1986):55-61.

Koch, Kurt E. Between Christ and Satan. Translated by Yolanda N. Entz. Berghausen Bd., Germany: Evangelization Publishers, 1961.

Lange, John Peter, ed. Commentary on the Holy Scriptures. 12 vols. Reprint ed. Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House, 1960. Vol. 12: James-Revelation, by J. P. Lange, J. J. Van Oosterzee, G. T. C. Fronmuller, and Karl Braune. Enlarged and edited by E. R. Craven. Translated by J. Isidor Mombert and Evelina Moore.

Ladd, George Eldon. A Theology of the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1974, 1979.

Latourette, Kenneth Scott. A History of Christianity. New York: Harper & Brothers Publishers, 1953.

Laws, Sophie S. "Does Scripture Speak in Vain? A Reconsideration of James IV. 5." New Testament Studies 20 (1973-74):210-15.

Lenski, Richard C. H. The Interpretation of The Epistle to the Hebrews and The Epistle of James. Reprint ed. Minneapolis: Augsburg Publishing House, 1963.

Lightfoot, J. B. Saint Paul's Epistles to the Colossians and to Philemon. Reprint ed. London: Macmillan and Co., 1892.

MacArthur, John F., Jr. Faith Works: The Gospel According to the Apostles. Dallas: Word Publishing, 1993.

Martin, Ralph P. James. Word Biblical Commentary series. Waco: Word Books, 1988.

Mayor, Joseph B. The Epistle of St. James. Limited Classical Reprint Library series. 1892; reprint ed. Minneapolis: Klock and Klock Christian Publishers, 1977.

- McClain, Alva J. The Greatness of the Kingdom, An Inductive Study of the Kingdom of God. Winona Lake, Ind.: BMH Books, 1959; Chicago: Moody Press, 1968.
- McGee, J. Vernon. Thru the Bible with J. Vernon McGee. 5 vols. Pasadena, Calif.: Thru The Bible Radio; and Nashville: Thomas Nelson, Inc., 1983.
- McNeile, Alan Hugh. An Introduction to the Study of the New Testament. 2nd ed. revised by C. S. C. Williams. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1927, 1953.
- Mercer, Larry A. "A Biblical and Cultural Study of the Problem of Racism." Bibliotheca Sacra 153:609 (January-March 1996):87-103.
- Mitchell, John G. "Does God Heal Today?" Bibliotheca Sacra 122:485 (January-March 1965):41-53.
- Mitton, C. Leslie. The Epistle of James. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1966.
- Moo, Douglas J. The Letter of James. Tyndale New Testament Commentaries series. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1985.
- _____. The Letter of James. The Pillar New Testament Commentary series. Grand Rapids and Cambridge, Eng.: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 2000.
- Morgan, G. Campbell. Living Messages of the Books of the Bible. 2 vols. New York: Fleming H. Revell Co., 1912.
- _____. The Unfolding Message of the Bible. Westwood, N.J.: Fleming H. Revell Co., 1961.
- Motyer, J. Alec. The Message of James. The Bible Speaks Today series. Leicester, England, and Downers Grove, Ill.: Inter-Varsity Press, 1985.
- _____. The Tests of Faith. London: InterVarsity Press, 1970.
- The Nelson Study Bible*. Edited by Earl D. Radmacher. Nashville: Thomas Nelson Publishers, 1997.

The New American Standard Bible. La Habra, Cal.: The Lockman Foundation, 2020.

Nicol, W. "Faith and Works in the Letter of James." Neotestamentica 9 (1975):7-24.

Oesterley, W. E. "The General Epistle of James." In The Expositor's Greek Testament. 4 (1910):383-476. 4th ed. Edited by W. Robertson Nicoll. 5 vols. London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1900-12.

Ott, Ludwig. Fundamentals of Catholic Dogma. 6th ed. Translated by Patrick Lynch. Edited by James Canon Bastible. St. Louis: B. Herder Book Co., 1964.

Pak, Joseph K. "A Case for James's Condemnation of the Rich in James 5:1-6 as Addressing False Believers within the Believing Community." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 63:4 (December 2020):721-37.

Patterson, Richard D. "The Widow, the Orphan, and the Poor in the Old Testament and the Extra-Biblical Literature." Bibliotheca Sacra 130:519 (July-September 1973):223-34.

Pearcey, Nancy R. Total Truth: Liberating Christianity from Its Cultural Captivity. Study Guide Edition. Wheaton, Il.: Crossway, 2005.

Pentecost, J. Dwight. "The Purpose of the Law." Bibliotheca Sacra 128:511 (July-September 1971):227-33.

Peterson, Eugene H. The Message: The New Testament in Contemporary English. Colorado Springs: NavPress, 1993.

Pfeiffer, Robert H. History of New Testament Times With an Introduction to the Apocrypha. London: Adam and Charles Black, 1949, 1963.

Plummer, Alfred. The General Epistles of St. James and St. Jude. New York: A. C. Armstrong and Son, 1905.

Porter, Virgil V., Jr. "The Sermon on the Mount in the Book of James, Part 1." Bibliotheca Sacra 162:647 (July-September 2005):344-60.

_____. "The Sermon on the Mount in the Book of James, Part 2." Bibliotheca Sacra 162:648 (October-December 2005):470-82.

- Rendall, Frederic. "The Epistle to the Galatians." In The Expositor's Greek Testament, 3 (1910):123-200. 4th ed. Edited by W. Robertson Nicoll. 5 vols. London: Hodder and Stoughton, 1900-12.
- Rendall, G. H. The Epistle of James and Judaic Christianity. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1927.
- Richardson, Alan. An Introduction to the Theology of the New Testament. New York: Harper & Row, 1958.
- Robertson, Archibald Thomas. Studies in the Epistle of James. 3rd ed. Revised and edited by Heber F. Peacock. Nashville: Broadman Press, n.d.
- _____. Word Pictures in the New Testament. 6 vols. Nashville: Broadman Press, 1931.
- Ropes, James H. A Critical and Exegetical Commentary on the Epistle of St. James. International Critical Commentary series. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1916.
- Ross, Alexander. The Epistles of James and John. New International Commentary on the New Testament series. Grand Rapids: William B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1954.
- Ryrie, Charles Caldwell. Biblical Theology of the New Testament. Chicago: Moody Press, 1959.
- _____. "The End of the Law." Bibliotheca Sacra 124:495 (July-September 1967):239-47.
- Sadler, M. F. The General Epistles of SS. James, Peter, John and Jude. London: George Bell and Sons, 1895.
- Scaer, David P. James the Apostle of Faith. St. Louis: Concordia Publishing House, 1983.
- Shogren, Gary S. "Will God Heal Us—A Re-examination of James 5:14-16a." Evangelical Quarterly 61 (1989):99-108.
- Showers, Renald E. Maranatha Our Lord, Come: A Definitive Study of the Rapture of the Church. Bellmawr, Pa.: Friends of Israel Gospel Ministry, 1995.

- Sidebottom, E. M. James, Jude, 2 Peter. New Century Bible Commentary series. London: Thomas Nelson and Sons Ltd., 1967; reprint ed. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., and London: Marshall, Morgan and Scott, 1982.
- Songer, Harold S. "Anointing with Oil: What Does It Mean?" Biblical Illustrator 12:4 (Summer 1986):32-34.
- Stanton, Gerald B. Kept from the Hour. Fourth ed. Miami Springs, Fla.: Schoettle Publishing Co., 1991.
- Storms, C. Samuel. Reaching God's Ear. Wheaton: Tyndale House Publishers, 1988.
- Stott, John R. W. Basic Introduction to the New Testament. 1st American ed. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1964.
- _____. Confess your Sins. London: Hodder & Stoughton, 1964.
- Strauch, Alexander. Biblical Eldership. Littleton, Colo.: Lewis & Roth Publishers, 1986.
- Stulac, George M. James. Downers Grove, Ill. and Leicester, England: InterVarsity Press, 1993.
- Swindoll, Charles R. The Swindoll Study Bible. Carol Stream, Ill.: Tyndale House Publishers, 2017.
- Tamez, Elsa. The Scandalous Message of James: Faith Without Works is Dead. New York: Crossroad, 1990.
- Tasker, R. V. G. The General Epistle of James. Tyndale New Testament Commentary series. Reprint ed. London: Tyndale Press, 1967.
- Tenney, Merrill C. The New Testament: An Historical and Analytic Survey. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1953, 1957.
- Thiessen, Henry Clarence. Introduction to the New Testament. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1943, 1962.
- Trench, Richard Chenevix. Synonyms of the New Testament. London: James Clarke & Co., 1961.

- Turner, Nigel. Christian Words. Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 1980.
- Unger, Merrill F. "Divine Healing." Bibliotheca Sacra 128:511 (July-September 1971):234-44.
- Vaughan, Curtis. James: Bible Study Commentary. Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House, 1974.
- Wall, Joe L. Going for the Gold. Chicago: Moody Press, 1991.
- Waltke, Bruce K. "The Book of Proverbs and Ancient Wisdom Literature." Bibliotheca Sacra 136:543 (July-September 1979):221-38.
- Warden, Duane. "The Rich and Poor in James: Implications for Institutionalized Partiality." Journal of the Evangelical Theological Society 43:2 (June 2000):247-57.
- Weaver, Paul D. "James." In Surveying Hebrews through Revelation, pp. 39-55. 2nd ed. Edited by Paul D. Weaver. Learn the Word Bible Survey series. N.c: Learn the Word Publishing, 2019.
- Wells, C. Richard. "The Theology of Prayer in James." Criswell Theological Review 1:1 (Fall 1986):85-112.
- Wessel, Walter W. "The Epistle of James." In The Wycliffe Bible Commentary, pp. 1429-40. Edited by Charles F. Pfeiffer and Everett F. Harrison. Chicago: Moody Press, 1962.
- Weymouth, Richard Francis. The New Testament in Modern Speech. Revised by James Alexander Robertson. 5th ed. Boston: The Pilgrim Press, and London: James Clarke & Co., Ltd., 1943.
- Wiersbe, Warren W. Be Mature. BE Books series. Wheaton: Scripture Press Publications, Victor Books, 1978.
- Wilkin, Robert N. "Another View of Faith and Works in James 2." Journal of the Grace Evangelical Society 15:29 (Autumn 2002):3-21.
- _____. "Can Faith Without Works Save? James 2:14." Grace Evangelical Society News 9:5 (September-October 1994):2-3.

- _____. "Repentance and Salvation, Part 2: The Doctrine of Repentance in the Old Testament." Journal of the Grace Evangelical Society 2 (Spring 1989):13-26.
- _____. "'Soul Salvation,' Part 2; Saving the Soul of a Fellow Christian; James 5:19-20," Grace Evangelical Society News 7:1 (January 1992):2.
- _____. "Soul Talk, Soul Food, and 'Soul Salvation.'" Grace Evangelical Society News 6:12 (December 1991)2.
- Wilkinson, John. "Healing in the Epistle of James." Scottish Journal of Theology 24 (1971):338-40.
- Winkler, Edwin T. "Commentary on the Epistle of James." In An American Commentary on the New Testament. Edited by Alvah Hovey. 1888. Reprint ed. Philadelphia: American Baptist Press, n.d.
- Zodhiates, Spiros. The Patience of Hope. Grand Rapids: Wm. B. Eerdmans Publishing Co., 1960.